Texas to Albany.
Watching Ottawa.
The Magic Slipper.
Railroad Common Sense.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

AS THIS IS written, looking from a New York Central train at Rhinecliff-on-the-Hudson, a big ship of the Texaco Oil Company is going down the river "very light."

On the up trip it had distributed oil from Texas along both banks as far north as Albany, taking advantage of the new deep channel.

Britishers also are using that channel. One of their ships recently took a load of locomotives from Albany to Russia. Good business people, the British.

American ships that by some strange freak of common sense are allowed to keep coastwise trade to themselves, bring cargoes of canned fruits from the West Coast up the river. We are beginning to develop the transportation by water that Europe understands so well.

AMERICANS WILL follow closely the proceedings at Ottawa.

King George's "thoughts and prayers are with the delegates of my governments." Those governments, England, Scotland, Ireland and the dominions, plan to buy only from each other while selling as much as possible to outsiders.

The conference thanks the king for his gracious message, and "present their respectful duty, with thanksgiving for Your Majesty's continued health, hoping Your Majesty and Her Majesty the Queen, may long be spared," etc.

Sean T. O'Kelly, representing Ireland, made a good speech. If he did not like the message sent to the king and queen, he said nothing about it. That message showed tact, with Ireland in mind, avoiding any reference to "loyal subjects" and saying nothing about "allegiance."

IN THE NEWS nothing is more interesting than the 5,000 women in Morocco, bowing down before a small silver slipper, supposed to possess miraculous power to help childless women.

First cattle were sacrificed to mollify a demigod supposed to keep the children from coming. Then the women bowed before the silver slipper, a thousand Moorish men looking on.

Not long ago, in a Christian church in Spain, you might have seen childless mothers on their hands and knees, licking the dust of the floor, from the entrance to the altar, praying for a child.

They, at least, addressed their supplications to the Ruler of the universe, not a magic slipper. If you offered the Moroccan women a good obstetrician, instead of a slipper, you would be called a shameless unbeliever.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE Commission approval of a merger of three hundred eastern railway lines in a 4-system railroad plan is a step in the direction of common sense.

There ought to be only ONE railroad system, run by our government, as the postoffice is run, with the ablest railroad men well paid to do the running, and the present private owners justly compensated.

SUPPOSE THE postoffice in the east had three hundred sets of managers, three hundred kinds of overhead, three hundred varieties of wasteful competition. How much do you think it would cost to send a letter from Florida to Alaska?

Our "best minds" say our government is not sufficiently able or honest to manage a great railroad system But they may be wrong.

THE RAILROADS and great railroad men like Harriman, Hill, the original Vanderbilt and others, have been the great "pioneers," builders of this nation.

Railroads are as important to the country as elevators to a skyscraper and should have public support and fair treatment, whether private ownership persists or private owners, discouraged by their problems, decide to "let Uncle Sam do it," and take a fair price for their property.

THE WAY to rule the air, earth's new ocean, is to have airships. France and Britain know it. The British have built the biggest land and water fighting airship in existence. The French are testing their "stratosphere plane," planned to fly from New York to Paris in 10 hours. The plane will travel 11 miles up, where the "thin" atmosphere offers little resistance.

Its engine, thanks to superchargers, will have vastly increased power at 20,000 feet up, and in the stratosphere, 60,000 feet above the earth, will develop 20,000 revolutions a minute. The pilot will work in a cabin hermetically sealed, with an automatic oxygen supply system.

THE FRENCH air ministry "has generously provided funds for the construction of this plane." We don't do that here, we are too poor, and besides we haven't any air ministry.

With us the airplane is merely "an accessory," under the management of the Army and Navy. That is as intelligent as though our surface warships were under divided management of sailing captains and canal boatmen.

BURIED DEEP in the speech that Premier Bennett of Canada made to visiting Britishers you find this about the new St. Lawrence canal:

"THIS WATERWAY WILL BE FREE TO ALL SHIPS OF THE COMMONWEALTH."

We built the Panama Canal, we acted the part of sentimental dodos, and made American ships pay as much as foreign ships pay, giving no advantage to our own people.

The British do not do that. With them it is "the British first, the rest nowhere."

'Glorifier' Dead

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD

Master showman, who died late last night in a Hollywood (Cal.) hospital after a notable career in the theater. An attack of pleurisy and pneumonia weakened his heart and the end came suddenly before his wife, Billie Burke, and his daughter could reach his side.

VETS TO FIGHT EVICTION

WASHINGTON, July 23.—(Universal.)—Orders to bonus seekers to evacuate their camps before August 4 were held up today by the District of Columbia commissioners, who wish to investigate the legal aspects of the case.

The 1,800 men in one group were joined late yesterday by 1,500 of the Hell's Kitchen crew of New York, "the toughest bunch in the bonus army," and were told by their commander, Walter W. Waters, not to move until other quarters had been found for them.

In ordering the men to hold their camp, Waters said:

"Our oppressors are trying to stampede us. I want you men to stay here until the District Commissioners find other billets for you. I am not going to start a fight unless I am forced to, but if they start any rough stuff, if they choose to evict the members of the B. E. F., they will have to evict them bodily, one by one."

Bonus Vet Seeks Missing Wife Here

Roy R. Harrison, of Jackson, Mich., today asked Pittsburgh police to find his wife, Betty, who disappeared in June after starting for Pittsburgh to visit friends. Harrison, who has been at the bonus camp in Washington since June 21, said he had made several attempts to locate his wife.

The Harrisons were former circus troupers. Harrison said his wife had intended to visit the family of a man named Salt, employed at a Pittsburgh bus terminal.

Temple Musician Sues Hutton for Pay

LOS ANGELES, July 23.—(AP.)—A new difficulty beset David L. Hutton, baritone husband of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, today.

A suit for $50 wages was filed against him by C. M. Tucker, who played in the Angelus Temple orchestra, but Hutton filed a counter claim for $12.50 he said Tucker owes him for advertising. Meanwhile Hutton's wife improved slowly from a head injury and a tropical disease.

DEATH TAKES ZIEGFELD IN CALIFORNIA

Wife Loses Race to Side of Famous Stage Producer

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 23.—Florenz Ziegfeld is dead.

For him whose life was a glittering and glorious chapter in the history of the American theater, the footlights were dark today. The stage empty, the curtain down.

Death descended swiftly on the glorifier of the American girl. A sudden heart attack seized him last night as he lay on a sickbed in Cedars of Lebanon Hospital. He was fighting the inroads of pleurisy when his heart failed, writing "finis" to his long and brilliant career.

So startlingly unexpected was the refusal of Ziegfeld's heart to function further that his wife, Billie Burke, speeding frantically to his bedside, was unable to reach her husband before the end came.

DEATH WINS RACE

She dashed into the hospital room and threw herself upon her knees at the fringe of Ziegfeld's bed. She called his name over and over again. But it was too late.

Two minutes before Billie Burke arrived, death had won the race.

And the widow, who herself was one of the beautiful girls glorified by the veteran maestro, fell prostrate with grief.

Ziegfeld, originator of the "Follies," was 63 years old. Earlier in the evening it appeared he was approaching victory in his prolonged battle to live. The doctors said he was improving. But, just as the famed showman had begun to climb back to recovery from a long spell of illness which began with an attack of pneumonia in New York last winter, his heart deserted him and the struggle was lost.

Billie Burke was not the only one of Ziegfeld's endeared to reach his bedside too late for a last farewell.

There was Patricia, his 20-year-old daughter. She, too, raced in an automobile to the hospital and she, too, arrived after death had come. It was not until 20 minutes

Alice Meets Smith, Thinks He's 'Grand'

NEW YORK, July 23—(AP.)—Alfred E. Smith, Democrat, and Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, Republican, have met for the first time and found things in common.

The former governor and the wife of the late speaker of the House conversed for two hours at a luncheon given yesterday by Julian Mason, editor of the Evening Post. Mrs. Longworth said she considered Smith "a grand man."

Church in Ambridge Damaged By Fire

AMBRIDGE, Pa., July 23.—Fire which broke out in the altar damaged the interior of Christ the King Roman Catholic Church, Tenth street, to the extent of $3,000. Firemen at the city building saw the burst of flames and answered the alarm.

GIRL VICTIM OF 'NICE' KIDNAPER

4 in Auto Party Robbed By 'Gentleman' Thief Before Abduction

Being kidnaped by a bold, bad bandit is not so bad when the desperado is a gentleman, Miss Betty Nelson, 20, of 414 Charles street, Knoxville, declared after just such an experience today.

Miss Nelson, with a girl friend and two men companions, was held up and robbed while seated in a machine parked in Curry road, Baldwin Township, last night. A small amount of money and jewelry was the only loot obtained, and, as the bandit bowed his leave, he turned to Miss Nelson with a curt order:

"Come with me, please."

In his hand he held a gun, related Miss Nelson, so she feared to disobey. After riding around for nearly two hours, she said, the bandit, who had little to say other than to inquire where she lived, drove her to the vicinity of her home.

Speaking of her experience, Miss Nelson smiled and remarked:

"Yes, he was pretty nice, I think."

The other occupants of the machine were Josephine Kanzella, 22, of 612 Beltzhoover avenue; Roy Summers, 420 Hays street, and Harold Smith, 412 Ormsby avenue.

Sally Eilers Past Crisis of Influenza

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 23.—(AP.)—Suffering from a severe attack of influenza, Sally Eilers, motion picture actress, has been kept to her home here the last four days.

Her physician said today the actress, wife of Hoot Gibson, cowboy screen actor, has passed the crisis.

Woman, Man Seized By U. S. Dry Raiders

Whisky, gin, beer and wine were reported confiscated by prohibition agents in raids yesterday in Punxsutawney and Indiana. Mrs. Bertha Todalak was taken into custody in the Punxsutawney raid and Joe Bongiovanni was arrested in the other raid, agents reported.

Wrong Man Shot in North Side Triangle

EUCLID WAGNER — FRANK KADER — MRS. GRACE WAGNER

Wagner, 31, radio entertainer known as the "Tennessee Rambler," held in Morals Court today along with his wife, "Cousin Sally" on the air, and Kader in the shooting of Harold Wester, 20, of 1106 West North avenue, early today. Wester was in an automobile with Kader, for whom police say Wagner was "gunning." Wagner said he had never seen Kader, explained: "He wasn't the man I was after." This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

'WRONG MAN' VICTIM IN TRIANGLE

Friend of Musician's Wife Escapes Bullets

A radio entertainer who bewailed the shooting of "the wrong man," his wife and the "right man" were ordered held over pending the outcome of the wounded man's injuries today at a hearing before Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court.

The man shot is Harold Wester, 20, of 1106 West North avenue. He has a bullet at the base of his brain and is in a serious condition at Presbyterian Hospital.

Charged with the shooting is Euclid Wagner, 31, one of the "Tennessee Ramblers." Also held are Wagner's wife, Grace, 31, of 1236 Sheffield street, known to the radio audience as "Cousin Sally," and Frank Kader, 23, of 412 Lacock street.

WRONG MAN SHOT

Wagner, testifying, declared he intended to shoot Kader. Instead, Wester, who was driving Kader in the latter's automobile, was shot, when taken into custody, Wagner pleaded, police say:

"Turn me loose. Give me my gun and I'll do it right."

At the hearing, Magistrate Jones asked Wagner, who said he had started out "to get" Kader, who had called his wife on the telephone a short time before:

"Did you intend to shoot him?"

Wagner replied:

"Absolutely."

The radio entertainer said Kader had annoyed him and his wife for two months and had "tried to break up my home."

'ONLY SELLING AUTO'

Kader, testifying, said he had talked with Mrs. Wagner only in an effort to sell her an automobile. He said he was a married man, had one child, but did not live with his wife.

Mrs. Wagner testified she was home, in bed, when the shooting occurred.

She said her husband had had trouble with Kader once before.

Both Mrs. Wagner and Kader denied being more than friends. The telephone conversation which Wagner overheard, Mrs. Wagner explained, involved the automobile which Kader was trying to sell her.

'CHILDREN NEED HER'

Earlier in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Wagner had made a personal appearance at a theater in East Pittsburgh. Kader also was in the neighborhood, police said.

While being questioned by detectives early today Wagner asked:

"You won't keep the girl (meaning his wife) here long, will you? Our children will need her."

The Wagners have two daughters, aged 9 and 11.

Wagner was told that they would need him, too, to which he replied:

"Yes, they'll need me, but I don't think they'll have me for a long time."

Wagner has been in ill health for sometime, Mrs. Wagner told police. Both are entertainers at Station WWSW.

MT. LEBANON ROW HURTS PAIR

Mt. Lebanon police, called to quell a disturbance, went to the home of W. S. Scott, 40, of 120 Hemlock street, Mt. Lebanon, early today and took Mrs. Margaret Scott, 38, to the Mercy Hospital suffering from a fractured jaw and nose and a punctured back.

Scott was held for questioning by police after being treated by a physician for lacerations of the head and face and a severely bitten finger.

Freight Train Blocks Bridge Almost Hour

Street car motormen and autoists fumed as traffic over Brown's Bridge was tied up for 45 minutes last night when a Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad freight train blocked the six crossings in Homestead. A draw head pulled out of one of the cars, police reported.

All thoroughfares in Homestead leading to the bridge were closed and many autoists sought other outlets. Finally the train was cut at the Amity street crossing.

Twice "Dead," Will See Olympic Games

LOS ANGELES, July 23.—(Universal.)—Twice reported dead within a year, once in an African cloudburst and once in a plague-stricken section of Manchuria, Dr. Arthur Torrance, explorer, sportsman and scientist, will be one of the livest spectators at the Olympic Games.

Dr. Torrance, after the games, plans to leave with other doctors and scientists for New Guinea, there to study leprosy among the natives.

Man Hurt in Fall On Steps of Hotel

Thomas Thornton, 66, of 5226 Holmes street, was in West Penn Hospital today with a probable fracture of the skull suffered when he fell on the steps in the Excelsior Hotel, 1132 Penn avenue, last night, according to police report. Thornton rented a room in the place several hours before the accident.

Franklin Section Cooled By Showers

FRANKLIN, Pa., July 23.—Rainfall amounting to 60-100ths of an inch in 36 hours brought relief from the torrid wave gripping this section for two weeks, the mercury for the sixth time this month climbed above 90, registering 92 as Friday's maximum.

Two Held In Girls' Death

ROCHESTER, Minn., July 23.—(AP.)—Two men, escorts of the two young women who died mysteriously while on a swimming party last Tuesday night were held in the county jail today. They asserted the girls had accidentally drowned and that they had fled because of fear of scandal.

The men, Reuben Kruger, 25, filling station attendant, and Jesse E. Salley, 30, garage mechanic, were taken in custody late yesterday at their homes in Plainview. Both are married and have families.

Authorities said they admitted calling Tuesday night for Miss Louise Prigge, 22, of Rochester, and her chum, Miss Frances Polikowski, 21. They told officers they became frightened after the girls drowned and left, taking the girls' clothes with them.

The death of a third young woman in the Lake City district was cleared with the announcement of a coroner's verdict of suicide in the case of Agnes Stevens, 22, of Melrose, Mass. Miss Stevens, officials said, had shot herself while despondent.

Father Denies Aid To Jailed Woman

Albert Berg, 616 Lorenz avenue, today said he would permit his daughter, Mrs. Rose Miller, 48, to remain in the Erie County Jail, where she is held on a charge of false pretense. Mrs. Miller, who on Wednesday identified the body of a man drowned in Lake Erie as that of her husband, George, has confessed, police say, that she identified the body to collect insurance.

In a letter to her father, Mrs. Miller said she needed money for rent and food, but expressed the hope that her troubles would end well.

COOL WEATHER FOR WEEK-END

Lower temperatures sent Pittsburghers to work with zest today. It was a welcome relief from the torrid wave which held this district in its grip for the past week.

The cool weather will prevail over the week-end, according to the Washington weather forecast.

Seeking relief from the heat of last night, Charles Vocivera, of 926 Western avenue, took his wife and three children to sleep in Highland Park. Early today an automobile skidded off the roadway, hitting Vocivera's daughter, Rose, 3, and the father. Both were taken to Pittsburgh Hospital. The driver of the machine fled after the accident.

Associated Press.

Near-normal July weather was resumed today on a large scale, but fatalities continued undiminished.

Rains concluded their eastward journey last night, bathing most of the seaboard and lowering temperatures to the eighties. Nearly 30 persons died of heat, however, seven in Wisconsin, six in St. Louis, four in Pennsylvania, three in Nebraska, and two in West Virginia and Michigan. A dozen others drowned in lakes and streams.

Chang Calls Troops From Jehol Front

PEIPING, July 23.—(INS.)—Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang returned today from Nanking, where he had attended a conference of Northern Chinese military leaders. Orders were immediately issued for the recall of troops recently ordered to the Jehol frontier.

It is understood danger of war between Japan and a united China over the province of Jehol has been averted temporarily. The Japanese, Mukden advices said, have withdrawn from Jehol.

Jessel Met at Airport by Norma, 'Honey Mama'

LOS ANGELES, July 23.—(AP.)—Flying from Fort Worth, Tex., George Jessel, comedian, arrived here last night in time to dine with the Talmadge family.

He was met at the airport by Norma Talmadge, former screen actress, and the other half of a romance which he confirmed at Fort Worth by saying, "We are very much in love," and hinting that both would be free soon through Reno divorces.

But Norma said:

"How can we be talking about getting married when we are both married now? Our relationship is just a business matter."

Jessel carried a telegram which he said was from Miss Talmadge. It was signed, "Honey Mama."

Norma Talmade and her husband, Joseph M. Schenck, film producer, both denied recently they planned to obtain a divorce. Norma and Jessel recently played a week together on the stage in Chicago.

Enemy War Aces to Fly Sea on Peace Mission

LONDON, July 23.—(AP.)—Two former World War fliers, who drilled at each other with machine guns over the Western front, 15 years ago, planned today a trans-Atlantic flight in the interest of peace.

They are Baron von Schleich, once the "black knight" of the Kaiser's flying warriors, and Maj. Christopher Draper, the "mad major" of Great Britain's war-time army of the air.

They plan to make the westward flight some time in the near future, they said, sitting side by side in the same cock-pit. Baron von Schleich remarked:

"Fifteen years ago we fought each other over the battle front. Now we are going on a peace crusade across the Atlantic, and our only bitterness arises from those misspent efforts in the war years.

"I have come to realize the futility of war. We propose to make a long tour of all the big cities and try to instill in people's minds the ghastliness of war. We want to meet Eddie Rickenbacker, Col. Bishop (Canadian airman), and other American aces and try to get them to joi our peace crusade."

HOOVER PREPARES HUGE LOAN TO STIMULATE INDUSTRY

HOPES TO BREAK SLUMP BEFORE NOVEMBER

Billion and Half Ready For Home Building And Improvements

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—President Hoover was paving the way today for injection of a $1,625,000,000 shot of adrenalin into the faltering heart of American industry.

Its rejuvenating effects will be such, he hopes, that smoke again will belch from paralyzed mills and factories and, before November's election, spell a promise that downward economic forces will be broken.

The dose that is expected to brighten the Republican party's chances at the polls is to be administered through the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, just authorized by Congress to underwrite "self-liquidating projects" throughout the country up to a total of a billion and a half, and the $125,000,000 system of home loan banks about to be established.

HOME CONSTRUCTION

Mr. Hoover, according to well informed sources, is preparing to have a very liberal interpretation placed on the term, "self-liquidating projects." He announced only yesterday, in connection with signing the Home Loan Bank bill, that between $300,000,000 and $500,000,000 of immediate construction is in sight as soon as small home builders can be financed, and predicted it would have a very salutary effect on employment.

The President's plans, however, go much further. It is reported he is smoothing the way to make it possible to undertake a gigantic remodeling of city slums into modern, airy, low-rent tenements.

This would be done through financial aid from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation under a ruling that transformation of the poor districts of the nation's great urban centers into attractively liveable areas should constitute a "self-liquidating" undertaking.

JOB BOOM SEEN

Employment for thousands of idle is visualized by Mr. Hoover along this avenue. In addition, he foresees an ever-widening circle of industrial activity that would be prompted by the necessary orders for steel, lumber, cement, coal and allied products.

Other "self-liquidating" projects into which the R. F. C.'s money will be poured include electrification of railways and construction of subways, toll bridges and tunnels.

Actual business of making the necessary loans is being held up pending President Hoover's appointment of two directors of the Finance Corporation to succeed Federal Reserve Governor Eugene Meyer and Farm Loan Commissioner Paul Bestor, who were relieved by Congress at White House request. Until a full directorate of seven is functioning, applications cannot be acted upon. It was expected that the vacancies would be filled by next Monday night, however.

CONFLICT OVER REYNOLDS EXECUTOR

Libby Asks Husband's Uncle to Act; N. Y. Firm Makes Claim

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., July 23.—(AP.)—Two conflicting moves aimed at distribution of the late Smith Reynolds' estate have come to light.

W. N. Reynolds, uncle of the tobacco fortune heir, announced from Roaring Gap that he had been asked by Mrs. Libby Holman Reynolds, the widow, to act as executor of the 20-year-old husband's estate.

Reynolds' statement came after he had received a letter from an unnamed New York legal firm notifying him one of its members had been appointed executor.

He said he had presumed, until he received word from Libby Holman that she wished him to act as executor, that she had retained the New York firm. He added that he had not learned who employed it.

FATHER 'ONLY LAWYER'

In Cincinnati, Alfred Holman, father of the former New York revue star and himself a lawyer, said:

"I am my daughter's only attorney."

Reynolds did not disclose the name of the New York law firm.

Smith Reynolds, shot to death on a sleeping porch of his home here two weeks ago, was a minor when he died. Seven years hence he would have received a $15,000,000 share of his late father's estate.

Young Reynolds' personal fortune was relatively small.

COURT FIGHT POSSIBLE

A court fight may be necessary to determine whether Libby Holman is entitled to dower rights in the $15,000,000 or solely in her husband's personal fortune.

Attorneys here have said that if Mrs. Reynolds has a child, which friends say she is expecting, it would share in the inheritance along with Reynolds' child by a former marriage.

Meantime, no legal steps have been taken here looking toward a disposition of the estate.

SHERIFF ACTIVE

ROANOKE, Va., July 23.—(AP.)—Sheriff Transout Scott, of Winston-Salem, N. C., accompanied by other officers, was in Roanoke yesterday in connection with his investigation of the fatal shooting of Smith Reynolds, 20-year-old tobacco heir.

Sheriff Scott and his companions conferred for nearly two hours with Robert C. Johnson, chief of the police identification bureau.

MARTIN VISIONS 'BURDENLESS' RELIEF ACT

State Treasurer Sees Aid Program Avoiding Tax, Debt Increase

HARRISBURG, July 23.—The special session of the Legislature will complete its work of providing relief for the unemployed and balancing the state budget "without imposing new taxes or the heavy burden of indebtedness upon the commonwealth," State Treasurer Edward Martin, chairman of the Republican State Committee, predicted today.

He avoided comment on probable passage of specific measures or the fate of the pending $18,885,000 economy program on which the Senate will vote finally Monday night.

GOING TO MT. GRETNA

Chairman Martin's views were expressed shortly before he left for Mt. Gretna, where, today, he begins two weeks of duty in the National Guard camp as brigadier general commanding the 55th Infantry Brigade. Martin said:

"In my experience I do not believe there has been as much work done to learn the real fiscal conditions of the commonwealth by the Legislature as in the present special session.

"I feel that the long days and the work on Saturdays and Sundays by many members of the Legislature should be appreciated by the people, as the results will be very evident in the future.

"The co-operation shown by the people of the commonwealth in the economy program is a fine indication that Pennsylvania will come out of this situation in good shape and without new taxes and the heavy burden of indebtedness."

ONE LOAN LIKELY

Although bond issues generally have been regarded with disfavor, one proposed loan is likely to be approved by this session, organization leaders believe. That is the McClure amendment to the state constitution to permit borrowing of $25,000,000, if needed, to meet expenses of the state for the two years starting next June 1. This measure is one of the 14 points of legislation agreed upon in advance of the session by Gov. Pinchot and legislative and political leaders.

Pennsylvania is limited by its constitution at present to debts totaling $1,000,000 for casual expenses. The McClure amendment would enlarge this borrowing capacity by $25,000,000 for the next two years only. If the 1933 Legislature believes the added money will be needed to balance the budget for the 1933-1935 appropriation period.

LABOR BUREAU CUT OPPOSED

A warning against possible increased loss of life and injuries in industries if the proposed 25 per cent reduction of the State Department of Labor and Industry appropriation is made was sounded today by William B. Rodgers, president of the McCrady-Rodgers Company, and a member of the Pennsylvania Industrial Council.

Leading a fight on the proposed cut upon which final action is scheduled in Harrisburg Monday, Rodgers declared:

"The proposed cut would seriously cripple our factory inspection system and come close to disrupting our hospital and public building inspection service, thus in one short-sighted action ripping away most of the safeguards which have been built up for the protection of the people in years of effort and careful study.

WALKER URGES PAYLESS MONTH

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP.)—Mayor Walker has asked New York City's 130,000 employes to step up and contribute a month's pay to avert a crisis in municipal finances.

He addressed a sober-faced audience of city department heads last night in the Board of Estimate chamber at City Hall. His remarks were heard by thousands on a nation-wide broadcast.

The Mayor, looking more serious than usual, evinced his own willingness to "give two months' salary," but was confusing as to just when he expected the proposed contributions to be made. At one point he said:

"I want you to come forward and say: 'For two months this year gave me a half month's pay, for four months deduct 25 per cent of my pay.'"

Walker to Dispatch Reply to Roosevelt

NEW YORK, July 23.—(INS.)—Mayor James J. Walker said today he hoped to complete his answer to the charges against him before Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt by Monday, and that after being printed it would probably reach the Governor about the middle of next week.

BRITISH TRADE THREAT AIRED

OTTAWA, July 23.—(INS.)—Great Britain was confronted today with the alternative of altering her traditional policy of no duty or preference on foodstuffs or seeing her fast-growing dominions strike out for themselves in world trade.

A hint of this was heard in the opening session Thursday, when the Canadian Prime Minister, Richard B. Bennett, proposed a system of preferential tariffs within the empire, designed to make Britain a protected market for dominion natural products in exchange for a dominions market in which British manufactured goods would receive heavy preference.

It became more than a hint today when Stanley M. Bruce, the Australian leader, made a blunt demand that Britain give her dominion children protection on food-stuffs in the English market —or else.

Irish Tariff Aimed At Britain Now Law

DUBLIN, July 23.—(AP.)—The Irish Free State's tariff bill, authorizing duties on imports from Great Britain, became a law today when it was approved by Gov. Gen. James McNeill.

President De Valera was expected to issue the first list of duties late today.

Divorces have been granted Sara E. Noling from Dudley M. Noling, Esther M. Modile from Abe Modile, Della Nassar from Edward G. Nassar, Thelma B. Grover from Samuel E. Grover, Blanche C. Muller from Robert P. Muller, Ann Louise LeRoy from Edward A. LeRoy.

SIEGE LIFTED, MINE CLOSED

DUGGER, Ind., July 23.—(AP.)—Twenty-seven nonunion coal diggers who had huddled in the Hoosier mine, near here, since Wednesday, fearing to face a crowd of a thousand union sympathizers, were safe out of the shaft today, having emerged under the protection of Indiana National Guardsmen.

Union pickets were not in evidence as the besieged miners gained freedom yesterday. They began dispersing following a conference at which it was agreed the mine would be closed pending efforts to negotiate a new wage agreement. The mine has been worked under the co-operative plan.

Adjt. Gen. Paul E. Tombaugh brought a detachment of 75 guardsmen to the mine at noon. A few miles distant, 100 other guardsmen were held in readiness, in case of disorder.

PRUSSIA CRISIS DECLARED PAST

By EDWARD L. DEUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, July 23.—With Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, Reich minister of defense, maintaining his "rule of iron" in Berlin and the province of Brandenburg, government leaders of the Reich declared today that the crisis in Prussia had passed.

In confirmation they pointed to the few reports of disorder received during the last 24 hours and declared the prompt repression by von Schleicher had turned a situation filled with dire possibilities into one of comparative peace.

Reich Minister of the Interior von Gayl, after a conference with Dr. France Bracht, Prussian minister of the interior, drafted a decree rescinding tomorrow the recent ban declared on political meetings. Its promulgation awaited only the assent of Gen von Schleicher.

Trade Boards Back Tax Office 'Ripper'

Planning to continue their fight to abolish the delinquent tax collector's office, directors of the Allied Board of Trade last night approved pending legislation in the State Legislature to that end. They also indorsed the back-to-the-soil movement on state-owned or leased land, financed by the state.

Insecticide Spray Fire Injures Man

Patrick Trent, 35, of 5328 Browns place, suffered burns on the hands when an insecticide he was spraying ignited and set fire to an upper room of his home last night, police said. He was treated at Pittsburgh Hospital.

WRITER LEAVES, ONE RETURNS

One Pittsburgh newspaperman today is returning to China, his native land, while another Pittsburgh reporter who went to Shanghai to cover events during the Chinese-Japanese hostilities returned.

The reporter leaving for China is Paul Kuo Jin Feng, who will return to his Canton home to engage in newspaper work. After study in the school of journalism of the University of Michigan, Feng worked for newspapers here in an effort to round out with practical experience his preparation for work in China.

Howard Browning, the returning Pittsburgher, spent five months in the Orient. Arriving yesterday, he stressed the prediction of Karl von Wiegand, chief foreign correspondent for Hearst newspapers, that the United States is in serious danger of being embroiled in an Oriental quarrel within the next few years.

GOV. ROOSEVELT, YOUNG CONFER

HYDE PARK, N. Y., July 23.—(AP.)—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Owen D. Young, sat down today to talk about "A great many things," including foreign affairs, international debts and allied problems.

From Young the Governor can obtain first hand information on foreign relations. As chief of the reparations commission, Young has been active in international matters.

Another visitor to "the farm," the Roosevelt estate, late today was to be United States Senator William H. King, of Utah. King, a staunch Democrat in a Republican state, was coming to pay a "courtesy call."

The Governor planned a quiet Sunday, but was preparing for a call next week from Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, who nominated Alfred E. Smith at the Chicago convention. Ely has not indicated whether he would support Roosevelt.

His decision is expected to carry weight among New England voters who have been strong for Smith.

PARK GRILLING HITS BOWSER

District Attorney Andrew T. Park today was reviewing the strenuous week's work of the county grand jury, preparatory to winding up the various probes Monday and Tuesday. He plans having the jury make presentments to the court later in the week.

Park deviated from his custom of having his assistants interrogate the witnesses before the jury yesterday. He took personal charge of the examination of Watson Bowser, whose $200.00 airport hauling contract has been under scrutiny.

For more than an hour Park is reported to have fired questions at the contractor. When Bowser emerged from the jury room he was mopping perspiration from his face. Park came out smiling and cool.

Four other witnesses, all Bowser employes, excepting Auditor M. C. Conick, had occupied the balance of the time before the jury.

Two clerks in the County Treasurer's office, Miss Helen Shiber and Miss Dorothy Imboden, were questioned briefly in the tax receipt probe and then the jury recessed until Monday.

POLICEMAN AND DEPUTY SLAIN

CHICAGO, July 23.—(AP.)—A suburban police officer was slain by four youths he had arrested for questioning and an employe of the Criminal Courts Building machine gunned to death in two outbursts of violence last night.

Three Gary (Ind.) youths, one of whom, officers said, admitted shooting Policeman Harold Koehncke, of suburban Dolton, were in custody. A fourth was hunted. The officer was slain in a car as he attempted to fight it out when the quartet started shooting.

Jack A. Werner, 28, a chief elevator operator in the Criminal Courts Building, who bore a deputy sheriff's badge, was killed on a South Side street as he drove with a young girl cousin. Another car came alongside and a machine gun belched death. Police asserted the slain man had a criminal record. Werner's companion, Mrs. Margaret Murray, fled and was believed to have escaped injury.

Oil Workers Hold West View Picnic

The Stanona Club, employes of the Standard Oil Company, is holding its annual outing today at West View Park.

PLOT SUSPECT FREED ON BAIL

Mrs. Gizella Young, whose alleged confession of a reputed insurance death plot led to exhumation of the body of a Munhall boy, was released from jail today under $1,000 bail, provided by the man for whom she is said to keep house, Frank Cuskas, of Homeville.

Regarded as a Commonwealth witness, Mrs. Young is expected to testify for the prosecution in September when she and Mrs. Mary Chalfa are tried on charges of felonious assault and battery in an attack on Mrs. Stella Chalfa, supposedly, "because she knew too much." A chemical analysis is being made of the stomach contents of Steve Allas, 12, whose body was exhumed.

Attorney Lois McBride announced she had been retained as counsel for Mrs. Young.

Chutes to Safety From Huge Glider

WASSERKUPPE, Germany, July 23.—(AP.)—Robert Kronfeld, noted aviator and glider, dropped safely 2,000 feet in a parachute yesterday when both wings of his glider "Austria," said to be the largest glider flier in the world, crumpled.

U.S.-Made Flags Replace Japanese Article

Japanese-made American flags distributed among postal workers to wear on their coat lapels at the "Postoffice Day" celebration here Tuesday will not be worn. The foreign-made flags distributed are being recalled and will be replaced with others of domestic manufacture.

This was decided yesterday at a conference of Postmaster James B. Anderson and the committee of postal workers in charge of the celebration. Instructions were sent to sub-stations and branches of the Pittsburgh postoffice to return the flags distributed earlier in the week.

Postal officials explained the purchase and distribution of the "Made in Japan" flags was unintentional. They were purchased from a wholesale dealer and sent to the stations for distribution before the foreign label was noticed. Twelve gross of the flags were purchased.

The celebration is to be held in connection with the Washington bicentennial and the birthday anniversary of the postal service.

Community Services Planned Tomorrow

The intense heat experienced the last few days is expected to bring even larger crowds to the outdoor Sunday community services being held by many churches during the summer months. The Rev. Walter L. Ritter, of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, will speak at Highland Park band shell community service at 4 p. m. tomorrow.

North Side union services will be held at the West Park band stand at 7:45 p. m. The Rev. F. J. Bryson, of the First Presbyterian Church, North Side, will speak.

The Rev. G. L. Himmelman, of the Emanuel's Lutheran Church, Bellevue, will conduct services on the Bellevue Y. M. C. A. lawn at 7:30 p. m.

Community services will be held by seven East End churches in the Fourth Presbyterian Church, Friendship avenue and Roup street.

East borough churches will participate in two union services tomorrow at 7:45 p. m., one in the Second Presbyterian Church, Wilkinsburg, the other in the Reformed Presbyterian Church.

South Hills churches will have community services on the Junior High School grounds at 7 p. m. and union services in the Dormont Presbyterian Church at 8 p. m.

Twenty-three churches in the Shadyside, East End and Oakland districts will meet at Carnegie Music Hall at 8 p. m. to hear the Rev. R. B. Johnson, of the Fourth United Presbyterian Church, preach.

ZIEGFELD DIED VIRTUALLY 'BROKE,' BROADWAY BELIEVES

As 'Glorifier of American Girls' Trod Stage of Life Before Curtain Fell

PATRICIA ZIEGFELD — BILLIE BURKE ZIEGFELD

The relapse and death of Florenz Ziegfeld in Hollywood this morning came so suddenly that his wife reached his room too late by minutes to bid him farewell. Their daughter, at the family home in Santa Monica, also lost to death in her race to his bedside.

ZIEGFELD AND "HOT-CHA" TROUPE ARRIVING IN PITTSBURGH FOR ITS WORLD PREMIERE

The dean of the American stage surrounded by some of the beautiful girls and comedians he helped make famous when he came here for the opening of the musical comedy which was one of his greatest successes. At the left, in rear, is Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon Theater. Mr. Ziegfeld is standing in the center at the rear. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

THE MASTER OF STAGECRAFT . . . A CHARACTERISTIC POSE

MADE MILLIONS, WAS 'GRAND SPENDER'

Follies Producer's Luck Fickle in Last Days

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP.)—Broadway, where sentiment and hard cash are twin kings, shook its head and said:

"Isn't it too bad he had to die broke?"

For the impression along the lane of gossip and glitter is that the grand glorifier, who garnered millions only to fling them forth in new ventures, was virtually a poor man.

He might, the Times Square bright lads said, have tucked away some insurance against the day when beauty and glamorous stagecraft should encounter sales resistance—but that was probably all.

RUNS INTO 'GRIEF'

Ziegfeld, who turned thumbs down on nudity half a dozen years ago and announced his trend was toward the old-fashioned, crimson-clad-girl-on-white-horse sort of stuff, with spectacular modern trimmings, had run into some grief toward the end.

After years of striking successes such as the "Follies," "Rio Rita" and others, he produced "Hot-Cha" recently—and the critics swung on him with hammers in both hands. A new type of show—sophisticated, satiric—such as "Of Thee I Sing" and "Face the Music" was packing them in.

Ziegfeld, always a fighter, hit back.

REVIVES "SHOWBOAT"

In advertisements, five columns wide, he asked:

"What is sophistication?"

He said no one could define it—and Americans preferred the "old-fashioned" sentiment, fun, music, staged in the grand manner. To prove it he revived his "Showboat"—and the critics, as well as the public, ate it up.

It was a great victory, he considered, although the quick closing of "Hot Cha" and his illness robbed it of some sweetness. His one ambition, he said, was to produce another Follies, more splendid than ever, with Maurice Chevalier as the star.

Ziegfeld was a grand spender. Across the continent, in search of new beauty to glorify, he traveled in private cars, munching bonbons pulled from the pockets of $200 suits. He took his own chef with him. His motor cars were imported. He argued with critics by telegraph—thousands upon thousands of words. His motto seemed to be:

"Don't spare the expense."

PUBLICITY MASTER

Publicity was a thing he never lacked. When Marilyn Miller, a name then glowing in tall letters as the star of "Sally," announced she was quitting Ziegfeld, there was a great to-do. She was back under his wing later.

Once he said that gentlemen prefer brunettes and 20 blonde members of his revue voted to strike unless he retracted. In 1926 he issued solemn statements taking the blame for the era of stage nudity, and asking the public to support only clean shows. He would say:

"I'm ashamed to be in the revue business with all this going on."

A long string of suits kept his lawyers busy. Once Myrtle Bauer, formerly a member of his glorified troupe, sued him for $5,000, charging that his police dog maimed her Pekingese.

Occasionally he would advertise for beauties—sometimes hand out a word of advice. Once he warned against overindulgence in sports as tending to destroy "a delicate degree of softness in face and figure."

INFLUENCE ON STAGE

Every one agreed that his influence on the American stage was great. He was considered a master of decoration, of color, costuming and presentation in the grand style. The theater world is dotted with stars who got their start or development with him—Will Rogers, Eddie Cantor, W. C. Field, Marilyn Miller, Marion Davies, Helen Morgan, Marie Dressler, Bert Williams—to name only a few.

Despite his aversion to sophistication, he kept in step with developments. It was commonly supposed he had gone to Hollywood to look into the possibility of abandoning the stage for talkie production. He gave the radio a thought. Four months ago Ed Sullivan, Broadway columnist, introduced him in his first venture on the air.

For him, the stage was all his life. His first wife, Anna Held, was a noted actress, and so was his second, Billie Burke. Miss Burke had wanted him to buy a California farm and settle down, but it is difficult to picture Florenz Ziegfeld "down on the farm."

FLO ZIEGFELD 'LUCKY' HERE

Florenz Ziegfeld was well known in Pittsburgh. He frequently came here with his productions, and his ill-health that led to his death dates from his last visit to this city, last February, when "Hot-Cha," which was to mark his "final curtain" in production, was being tried out prior to its New York premiere. To whip the show into shape required constant rehearsal, and Mr. Ziegfeld, like all members of the company, worked tirelessly, going long periods without sleep.

He was weary after a few days, and commented that he couldn't stand it as well as he once did—"I'm not as young as I used to be." He held out until the show was well in the second week of its engagement here, when he had to go to bed in his hotel with an attack that was said to be a severe cold. He went with the company to New York, and was confined to his room for some time.

Mr. Ziegfeld was preceded in death only a few weeks by his general manager, Daniel C. Curry, who died July 6 in his home in New York. He, too, had been in Pittsburgh and worked to the point of exhaustion in the perfecting of "Hot-Cha."

CAPONE RANCH STORY DERIDED

CHICAGO, July 23.—(AP.)—Associates of Al Capone, Chicago gang ruler now in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., scoff at reports Capone contemplates purchasing the 101 ranch from Col. Zack Miller, Ponca City, Okla. One of Capone's acquaintances commented:

"If you have anything to sell, the cheapest way to advertise it is to announce Capone wants to buy it."

Reports were that Capone planned to operate the ranch to give employment to some of his idle countrymen from Sicily; to grow grapes for a wine making syndicate and to develop oil resources.

Miller could not be located in downtown hotels where he was reputed to be conferring with "Diamond" Jack" Alterie, bussiness representative for Capone.

Carpenter Injured In 40-Foot Plunge

Suffering internal injuries and probable fractures of the leg and skull when he fell from the roof of a house he was repairing in Standish road, Mt. Lebanon, late yesterday, Samuel Hoover, 34, a carpenter, of 179 Lecky way, North Side, was in St. John's Hospital today. He fell 40 feet and landed on a pile of rocks.

Man Killed, 2 Hurt In Cuban Bomb Plot

HAVANA, July 23.—(INS.)—A bomb outrage attributed to politics occurred in the suburb of Viborba today. The infernal machine wrecked the home of Senor Proenza, a government adherent, killed one man and injured two others.

GLADYS GLAD — FLORENZ ZIEGFELD

SET 3D DEGREE DEATH TRIAL

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP.)—The forces of the law had received a black mark and a white mark today as investigations into police and prison treatment of prisoners moved into a climax.

A grand jury at Mineola, N. Y., returned indictments after hearing charges against 13 policemen in the "third degree" death of Hyman Stark. Four of the officers had been charged with second degree murder, seven with second degree assault and the others with lesser offenses connected with the alleged strangulation of the prisoner. The sealed indictments will be produce in court Monday morning. The officers go on trial August 8.

In Raiford, Fla., prison officials and employes were given a clean bill of health in the deaths of Harold Bradley, of Loretto, Pa., and Frank Powell, one-legged convict of Miami. Prison executives were exonerated by the board of state institutions after a two-day session, in which 80 convicts were questioned.

Earlier in the day Capt. P. H. Randall, warden of the county penitentiary at Griffin, Ga., was indicted for involuntary manslaughter in the killing of John T. Lassiter, Negro convict. He was freed in $1,000 bail.

100th Anniversary To Be Celebrated

The congregation of the Concord Presbyterian Church, Brownsville road, will observe their hundredth anniversary tomorrow morning at 11 a. m. The Rev. Dr. J. Walter Watson will preach on "Retrospect and Prospect."

BETTY, UNCLE BOB BACK

After two weeks under the "shade of the old apple tree" on Uncle Tobias' Westmoreland County farm, Uncle Bob and Betty are home again. Yes, they had a good time, but Betty emphatically says that two weeks on a farm is enough for a little girl from a big city.

Anyway, they'll be back on WCAE at 12:30 o'clock noon tomorrow, ready and waiting to read the Sun-Telegraph comics to the kiddies, who have missed them for two weeks. However, Uncle Bumpus and Billy did some mighty fine batting for Uncle Bob and Betty while they were away.

Florenz Ziegfeld Dies In Hollywood Hospital

after the noted impresario had breathed his last that the daughter of whom he was so fond appeared.

DAUGHTER BREAKS DOWN

Seeing that her father was dead, Patricia broke down in a convulsion of uncontrollable grief.

Mother and daughter, clinging to each other in their sorrow, were led gently from the room by attendants.

Their grief was too deep today to allow of thoughts of funeral plans. Burial arrangements were held in abeyance. It was surmised that Ziegfeld's body may be returned to New York, where he achieved his greatest triumphs, for interment.

The great producer died amid comparatively lonely surroundings. In the modest little hospital room when the end came were only his physician, Dr. Marcus Radwin, and a nurse.

His wife was working on a picture at a film studio when she was summoned to the telephone and informed by hospital attendants that her husband had suffered a heart attack and was sinking rapidly.

Not hesitating even to don a wrap, Miss Burke dashed frenziedly out of the studio and hurried in an automobile to the hospital.

Only a few days ago Miss Burke had arranged to have Ziegfeld transferred to the local hospital from a sanitarium in New Mexico, where he had been confined several weeks.

ILLNESS REVEALED

Ziegfeld's illness was not known to his friends until his wife recently revealed his presence in the New Mexico sanitarium. The pleurisy had developed from an attack of pneumonia suffered in New York last winter while Ziegfeld was busily engaged in his theatrical activities.

When the producer was brought to the hospital here his condition became grave, but during the last three days he was beginning to show improvement, and the journey toward recovery was believed by his physicians to have started.

Ziegfeld celebrated his last birthday March 21 in bed in New York suffering from a severe cold.

Miss Burke arrived in Hollywood July 6 with her daughter and Katherine Hepburn, A New York millionairess, to make a picture "Bill of Divorcement" and had worked steadily for two weeks on the film.

URGED TO RETIRE

When Miss Burke arrived in Hollywood she declared she wanted to desert Broadway forever for a chicken ranch in Santa Monica, where she has a home. She declared she wanted Ziegfeld to retire, join her in the venture and reside here the rest of his life. Ziegfeld, she said, had worked too hard in New York.

Beginning with the historic Chicago World's Fair of 1893, Ziegfeld's career spanned an entire generation of theater-goers who thrilled to his spectacular musical shows.

He was born in Chicago on March 21, 1869, and in his native city he embarked on his life-long work as a showman in 1892. His first professional feat was the bringing of the European military bands to Chicago to perform at the World's Fair.

During the fair he organized and managed the universally-famous Trocadero.

It was 25 years ago that he contributed to the American stage that combination of gayety, song and dancing known as the Follies. Every year since that beginning the Follies have trod the boards, a veritable criterion for all other revues of that stage.

Miss Burke was his second wife. His first wife was Anna Held, the actress.

Hausner's Plane Salvaged By Ship

GENOA, Italy, July 23.—(Universal.)—The abandoned monoplane of Felix Stanislaus Hausner, from which the Polish-American aviator was rescued after drifting in mid-Atlantic when his attempted flight to Poland ended in a crash, was salvaged yesterday by the Italian steamer Escambia.

The skipper of the Italian steamer radioed his home office here he had picked up Hausner's plane off the Azores.

WIFE NO. 1 FREE IN MONEY PLOT

Mrs. Katherine Castle Warren, alleged to have conspired with her husband, William L. Warren, 62-year-old chemist, charged with bigamy and forgery, was free today following her arrest in Greensburg yesterday by Constabl George P. Andrews, of Wilkinsburg. She left the Wilkinsburg Police Station last night after Mrs. Stella Venn Warren, who Warren was alleged to have married illegally, refused to prosecute her.

Warren was to be arraigned today before Squire George Shields in Wilkinsburg on a forgery complaint made by George Venn, brother of the second wife, who lives at 5115 Ellsworth avenue.

Wife No. 2 after declining to appear against the first Mrs. Warren, declared she would stick by her husband, despite the charge of Constable Andrews that she was aware Warren was living in Greensburg with his first wife on money obtained from her, a fact also known, he said, to the first wife.

Andrews said Warren had obtained at least $40,000 from Mrs. Venn and her brother on the plea that he was using it promoting a cancer cure.

'MA' FERGUSON IN NEW RACE

HOUSTON, Tex., July 23.—(Universal.)—Whether the nation's first woman Governor, Mrs. Miriam A. (Ma) Ferguson, will sit in the Texas state house again was probably to be determined at the polls today in the state-wide primary.

It was conceded Mrs. Ferguson and Ross S. Sterling, incumbent, would lead the field of six candidates for the governorship. But even so, these two may have to fight it out in the run-off primary August 27. Nomination on the Democratic ticket, of course, is the same as election in the Lone Star state.

Voters also will decide whether the question of prohibition should be resubmitted to the people. Even in this perennially dry state, the proposal is given a 50-50 chance of being approved, so greatly have opinions changed in the last few years and months.

Coats Stolen After Window Is Smashed

Two coats were reported by police to have been the loot of Tony Skinow, 50, whom they accuse of having broken a window at 816 Liberty avenue early today.

NEWS WITHHELD FROM MOTHER

CHICAGO, July 23.—(INS.)—For fear the shock may prove fatal to her, news of the death of Florenz Ziegfeld was withheld today from his aged mother, Mrs. Rosalie Ziegfeld.

Mrs. Ziegfeld, 83, was in bed in her modest little home here, seriously ill.

Because of her advanced age and her delicate condition, doctors warned the family not to break the news of the impresario's death to his ailing mother.

Mrs. Carl Ziegfeld, a daughter-in-law of the sick woman, said she was informed of the producer's death early today in a long distance telephone call from Ziegfeld's sister, Mrs. Willis Buhl, in Detriot.

Girl's Shot 'Into Air' Kills Boy Berry Picker

INDIANA, Pa., July 23.—(AP.)—A 17-year-old girl who fired a rifle "just to frighten" berry pickers on her father's lands, faces a murder charge today.

Harry Anderson, 15, one of the pickers, died in a hospital last night. A bullet had entered his throat.

Officers arrested Marie Douglass, 17, of Greenwich, a mining village, who, Anderson's companions said, fired at them. The girl met Detective Harry Kooze and Sheriff A. Eugene Wilson at the gate. With her father she came to Indiana.

She told the officers her family had been "pestered" by persons taking berries for several days and when Anderson and his friends refused to leave at her request, she fired into the air. Anderson fell.

The girl stood dry-eyed while the formal murder charge against her was prepared. When it was read, she broke into tears.

She sobbed:

"I didn't shoot at them. I didn't"

They released her on $5,000 bond for a preliminary hearing Thursday.

Judge Indorses Shorts; Legs No Novelty

CHICAGO, July 23.—(AP.)—Superior Judge Marcus Kavanagh has granted an injunction restraining Irving Park Commissioners from chasing women clad in "shorts" from the tennis courts.

Ruth Smutney, 18, and Mona Thome, 20, said park police were offended when they appeared on the courts in their abreviated costumes, and chased them off. They sought legal sanction for the dress.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, city health commissioner, was among those who testified benefit was to be derived wearing shorts to expose more of the body to health-giving rays of the sun. He said:

"There is nothing immodest in these shorts. No one would look at these girls' legs twice these days. Twenty years ago they might be exciting, but times have changed."

River Bank Philosopher To Join Gold Rush

Before much more water flows down the Monongahela River, Walton Williams will be on his way to Alaska—in search of gold.

He will be a strange kind of prospector, because he doesn't care whether he finds any gold.

All of which may be accounted for. Williams is one of those men who can be seen any time of day lounging in front of the Helping Hand, on Water street, or on the river bank. But, always, he is apart from the crowd, often sitting down by the river.

A year ago he was a construction superintendent for the American Bridge Company. Then he lost his job, tried to find another, and finally settled down to wait.

Thirty-six years old, slender and strong, he tells you why he stays apart from the "mob":

"You see that river. If I got in and swam with the current I would soon be carried away with it. It's just like that in life. That's why I have tried to keep out of the current."

Five months ago he read about a gold rush in Alaska. The idea has grown with him, because ever since he was a student at Duke University, North Carolina, he has wanted to see Alaska.

William's philosophy of life will be the subject of the "Ravaries" hour over Station KQV Sunday.

SERVICES BEING HELD AT OLD CAMP MEETING GROUNDS

TARENTUM M. E. GATHERING IN 83RD YEAR

Two old-time camp meeting grounds are again in operation, one near Tarentum and the other in the Sewickley valley. The 83rd annual session of the Pittsburgh and Tarentum Methodist Episcopal Camp Meeting Association began last night on the historic old grounds near Natrona Heights and will continue through next Saturday. Tonight a song service led by Lester H. Case, will precede a sermon by the Rev. Jack Munyon at 8 o'clock.

Tomorrow at 10 a. m. church school will be held, with a sermon at 11 a. m. by the Rev. Munyon; song serice at 2:45 p. m.; sermon at 3 p. m. and song service at 7:45 p. m. In the evening a union service will be held in Riverview Memorial Park, Tarentum, at 8 p. m.

MISSIONARY DAY

Wednesday is Missionary Day, with Mrs. J. M. Crumrine presiding. A demonstration, "The Christ of Youth," will be presented by young women of the Emory M. E. Church at 10 a. m. At 2 p. m. the Foreign Missionary Society will meet with Miss Blanche Craig presiding. Thursday is the annual Children's Day in charge of Dr. W. W. Hall. Friday is Patriotic Day. C. H. Ruhe, superintendent of Allegheny County Memorial Hall will preside.

The sixty-fourth annual meeting of the Mt. Sewickley Camp Meeting Association which opened last night will continue through Sunday, July 31. The Rev. J. C. Brown, of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church, New Brighton, is in charge. Music is under the direction of Clyde M. Miller, of Point Breeze Presbyterian Church.

BIBLE PANTOMIME

The camp meeting committee includes Mrs. Charles E. Lowe, Edward Evans, James R. Pitcairn, Frank Kearns and John M. Carr. This evening a Bible pantomime will be presented by members of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church. Tomorrow Sunday school will be held at 2 p. m., with a sermon by the Rev. Dr. Homer D. Whitfield, of the Beaver Methodist Episcopal Church, at 3 p. m. The evening sermon will be preached by the Rev. J. C. Matteson, of Ambridge Methodist Episcopal Church.

Services will be concluded a week from tomorrow, Sunday evening at 8 p. m., with a sermon by the Rev. Dr. B. R. McKnight, superintendent of the Washington district of the Pittsburgh Conference.

Thrills of Racing Classic Broadcast Over WCAE, Senator Borah Speaks

One of the season's most outstanding turf events, the $25,000 Arlington Handicap at Chicago, with a dozen of America's most famous horses matching speed and stamina, is scheduled to go on the air at 6 o'clock tonight over an NBC network, including WCAE. The eyewitness account of the running is broadcast with Clem McCarthy, NBC racing expert, at the microphone.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Equipoise, winner of seven straight races; William du Pont's White Clover; Gusto, regarded as the champion 3-year-old of the year; Tred Avon and Plucky Play are among the horses expected to compete in the mile and a quarter classic. Equipoise, to be ridden by "Sonny" Workman, already has won $228,000, and if Workman should bring him in first today, Man O' War's record as a money maker would be surpassed.

"Sonny" Workman

A special radio program marking the first trial run in deep water of the S. S. Manhattan, largest America-built liner, is billed on KDKA tonight at 10. The program includes talks by Clinton L. Bardo, president of the New York Shipbuilding Corporation; Capt. George Fried, hero of many rescues at sea, who is to command the vessel for the U. S. Lines, and Commander Edward Ellsberg, United States Navy, retired, famous submersible and salvage expert. Music is provided by Harry Reser's Orchestra.

The Lausanne Reparations Agreement is the topic of an address by Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, when he appears as guest speaker on the Columbia Institute of Public Affairs on WJAS tonight at 10:15. He recently was selected by President Hoover as the medium for the administration's reply to the now famous "Gentlemen's Agreement."

Program Pointers

Little Betty Jane Atkinson, 10-year-old member of the Atkinson String Ensemble, is starred as violin soloist during the ensemble's program from the studios of KDKA tonight at 6:45. . . . On the same station at 5:15, W. T. Rowe and T. R. Alexander, of the Y. M. C. A., describe a half dozen novel ideas for the aquatic-minded and give a radio lesson on the side stroke during a program dedicated to campers anywhere.

Miss Atkinson

An international broadcast scheduled over a Columbia network from Frankfort, Germany, brings a recital of choral music by the Berlin Teachers' Male Chorus to WJAS listeners from 4 to 4:30 today.

A novel program of sound effects is presented on KQV today at 5:45 by players from Marjory Stewart's Microphone Playhouse. The continuity was written by Edwin Schaughency.

"The Secret of Sing Long," a three-act mystery drama, is presented for the First Nighter audience over KDKA tonight at 9:30.

Those droll funsters, "The Lavender Network Players," travel far south for the scene of their burlesque sketch presented during the Follies broadcast on WCAE at 9 o'clock.

Dance music scheduled on WCAE tonight features George Olsen and his orchestra during the cigaret hour from 10 to 11; the WCAE Orchestra at 11:15; Paul Whiteman at 11:30; Buddy Rogers at midnight and Don Bestor from 12:30 to 1 a. m.

Fan Fare

Ted Weems' real name is Wilfred Theodore Weymes . . . He's a direct descendent of the Angus Weymes who invented the Scot bagpipes . . . The maestro himself is an inventor of no little note, having both the goofus horn and the mellohorn to his credit . . . The second volume of songs compiled by Lowell Patton, director of the "Song for Today" broadcasts, has just been published, marking the program's first anniversary . . . Ramona, singer with Paul Whiteman, is never seen without her earrings.

Ted Weems

Gene Austin wears a Chinese ring which was presented to him by a mandarin at a party in Shanghai . . . It is set with four diamonds, an emerald and a ruby . . . has been lost several times, but always returns.

When Henry McLemore arrived in New York from Chicago, he had only $7.80 in the world . . . he spent 10 cents for a frankfurter and $7.70 for a front-row seat at the Follies.

Leonard Joy, who plays dance music on the air with gusto, spends his week ends at a New Jersey summer resort where dancing is banned . . . Toscha Seidel once went tobogganing down Oslo's famous 15-mile slide with the King of Norway . . . Ernie Hare's severest critic is his 8-year-old daughter, Marilyn . . . Time and again she has told her baritone father she thought his programs were "pretty dumb" . . . "Two Guitars," the Gypsies' theme song, was transcribed from a traditional Russian folk song by Harry Horlick . . . William Van Hoogstraten, after listening to one of the Boswell Sisters' rehearsals, gives the girls a big verbal boost . . .

Patricia Pitt's Comment on Society Events

WOMEN'S AUTHOR CHOSEN

Drawing Room To Rodeo Queen

In Mayfair
—With—
Patricia Pitt

More and more news pours in day by day, and now I can tell you of another bit that will be of immense interest to Pittsburghers, of a wedding terminating one of the most exciting engagements to be announced.

Wednesday morning in the Augustus Lutheran Church, in Trappe, Pa., the oldest Lutheran church in America, Louise Lerch, of Allentown, Pa., soprano of Metropolitan Opera fame, becomes the bride of Donald Brien, of Mayflower avenue.

You'll recall that Doris Alden Brien, the sister of the bridegroom-elect, is to be married in the fall to George L. Tamm, Jr., of Richmond Hill, N. Y. Her betrothal was announced in March.

* * *

When a wedding looms on the social horizon these late July days, when marriages are infrequent, all interest centers on the nuptials. Today I know of a wedding of interest here.

Mrs. James Elwyn Brown, Jr., wife of the secretary of the legation at Santo Domingo, and daughter-in-law of the James Elwyn Browns, of Sewickley, who has arrived in Washington to visit her parents, Capt. Alfred W. Johnson, United States Navy, and Mrs. Johnson, at Washington, will attend a marriage.

She'll be matron of honor at the wedding of her sister, Elvira Lindsay Johnson, and Charles Burke Elbrick, of Louisville, Ky., to take place Wednesday.

* * *

James Barlow Cullums and Mollie Cullum, their daughter, of Pittsburgh and New York, have left for their country place, Riveredge Farm, near Reading, Pa., where they plan to remain until September.

* * *

Many society women are aiding Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, chairman, and Joseph M. Scribner, assistant chairman, in planning for the rodeo to be held next Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Old Pittsburgh Hunt Club on the Grant Curry property. The affair is a benefit for the Seeing Eye, an organization which trains dogs to lead the blind.

Aiding Rodeo

Aiding Mrs. John W. Lawrence, chairman of parking and tickets, are Mrs. J. Hanson Rose, Mrs. A. Rex Flinn, Mrs. Howard Heinz, Mrs. H. H. Laughlin, Mrs. Lewis A. Park and Mrs. B. F. Jones III.

Mrs. Frederick T. Billings, who is in charge of patronesses, has a large committee, including Mrs. William B. Trainer, Mrs. George S. Ebbert, Mrs. T. M. Jones III, Mrs. W. Edgar Reed, Mrs. Harrison Thomas, Mrs. C. E. Lott, Mrs. John Murtland, Mrs. William R. Blair, Mrs. Francis Sellers Guthrie and Mrs. Twing Brooks.

Mrs. A. P. Woolfolk, who is chairman of refreshments, has an even larger committee, including Mrs. Stanley N. Brown, Mrs. Raymond Ford Moreland, Mrs. Raymond Harrison, Mrs. Donald C. Anderson, Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III, Mrs. Thomas G. McCutcheon, Mrs. George A. Kelly III, Mrs. H. H. McClintic, Jr., Marjorie Kimball, Mrs. Shirley Aystin, Mrs. L. R. Schmertz, Jr., Mrs. Edward Purcell Mellon II and Mrs. Dorwin Donnelly.

Aiding In Work

Younger set members aiding Mrs. Woolfolk will be Mary Colwell Jennings, Virginia and Nancy Doyle, Lucretia Billings, Elinor Reed, Virginia Evans, Gretchen Rose, Lois Tack, Betty Higgins and Martha Yost.

MRS. WALTER HEACOCK . . AS ELEANOR M'CLINTOCK SHE DESERTED PITTSBURGH SOCIETY

She comes from one of the city's oldest families. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Eleanore V. Drum Is Married to Missourian

Announcement is made of the marriage at 7 o'clock the evening of July 9, in the East End Christian Church of Miss Eleanore Virginia Drum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Drum, of Stanton avenue, to John Willis Taylor, of St. Louis, son of Mrs. Margaret T. Holyland, of Pittsburgh. Officiating was the Rev. John Ray Ewers.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will reside in St. Louis after August 1.

* * *

The descendants of Peter Croco are holding their fourteenth reunion at Silent Brook, South Park, this afternoon.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John F. Matter have made known the marriage of their daughter, Miss Florence Christine Matter, to Paul Thomas Stackhouse, Jr., son of Mr and Mrs. P. T. Stackhouse, of Ellsworth avenue, which took place June 4 at 1:30 o'clock in the home of the bride in the presence of the immediate families.

Announce Marriage

* * *

Because of death in the family, Mr. and Mrs. David Alter have indefinitely postponed the reception in honor of their daughter, Miss Geraldine Evelyn Alter, whose betrothal was recently announced.

Mrs. H. C. Breidert is president of the Crafton club, and M. L. G. Stone is chairman of the and committee.

Council Selects Inez H. Irwin As Author

Inez Haynes Irwin, widely known novelist, and first woman president of the Authors' League of America, has been chosen by the National Council of Women to write a book summarizing the achievements of American women for the past 100 years.

The books will be published by the council in connection with the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago next year. The announcement was made today by Miss Lena Madesin, Phillips, president.

Six months of intensive research by a staff of experts has assembled material for the book Mrs. Irwin will write, which will cover all the important developments affecting women of this country individually and collectively since 1833. It will also give a condensed history of the 29 organizations connected with the council, which have an aggregate membership of 5,000,000 women.

An ardent feminist, co-founder with Maud Wood Park of the National Collegiate Equal Suffrage League, which flourished during the campaign for the Woman suffrage Amendment, and a frequent contributor to feminist publications as well as to popular magazines, Mrs. Irwin is an appropriate choice for the authorship of the proposed volume, the council feels.

The research material has been assembled and compiled under the supervision of Dr. Kathryn McHale, executive director of the American Association of University Women by Miss Judith Clark, an expert in the research field, and Miss Carolyn Chapin, her assistant.

Two significant facts intimately affecting women which are sure to find a place in the volume, since they happened at the very beginning of the century which the book commemorates, are the formation of the first woman's club in America and the admission of women to Oberlin College, first institution of higher education in the world to open its doors to women. Both these events happened in 1833, at the outset of the period of which Mrs. Irwin is to write.

Miss Josephine Jaegle is general chairman of the card party for the benefit of the Bishop Boyle Home for Aged Women, West View, to be held Tuesday afternoon and evening, at the home. A cafeteria supper will be served at 6 o'clock.

Mrs. M. Kenny, chairman of refreshments, will be aided by Miss Grace and Miss Ann Kenny, Miss Marie and Miss Margaret Kenny Miss Mildred Deer, Miss Vera Emminger, Miss Dorothy Emminger, Miss Eleanor Brown and Mrs. Leo Cassels. Dr. F. Kenny is in charge of bingo; Mrs. J. R. Bone, tickets, and Mrs. William J. Smith, Jr., publicity.

Former Society Girl Now Wild West Rider

Appears in Rodeo Here for Charity, Aiding Blind

Mrs. Walter Heacock, who, as Eleanor McClintock, deserted Pittsburgh's elite for the rough and tumble life of the rodeo, will ride a bucking horse for charity's sake at the Old Hunt Club Ring, Fox Chapel district, next Saturday.

Mrs. Heacock and her husband, a former world champion rodeo performer, will be headliners at the exhibition being put on by society folk for the benefit of the "Seeing Eye," an organization which finances the training of dogs to lead the blind..

SACRIFICED FOR LOVE

Daughter of Norman McClintock, of one of the oldest Pittsburgh families, reared in quiet luxury, graduate of Westover School, art student at Carnegie Tech with longings to be a portrait painter, she gave it all up, she related today, seated in the garden of her father's home, for the "more romantic, if not lucrative business of rodeo."

Her romance blossomed on a Western ranch where she met Walter Heacock, cowboy. She married him in 1928, in New York.

From then on life was interesting but turbulent, she said. On their honeymoon, which they took with a rodeo troupe, they were stranded in Chile. Making their way to California, they cared for horses on a dude ronch, led riding and pack trips.

HOLDUP THWARTED

One winter they spent in Montana, where their baby was born. She said:

"We had a home there, just a shack, and lots of friends."

Mrs. Heacock thus described her rodeo life:

"We travel from one rodeo to another in a small roadster with our two horses in a trailer. One night in Idaho a bandit with a handkerchief mask and guns tried to hold us up. But Walter stepped on the gas and our car jumped right at him. He leaped out of the way in time—just an amateur, I suppose.

"We're trying to save our money to stock our small ranch in New Mexico."

What recreation does Mrs. Heacock prefer?

"Well, if I could just stay in one place, that would be recreation for me."

Science Churches Topic to Be 'Truth'

"Truth" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon to be read tomorrow in all Christian Science churches. The golden text will be, "He who blesseth himself in the earth shall bless himself in the God of truth; and he that sweareth in the earth shall swear by the God of truth."

"Yellow Jaundice" Warns That Bile Isn't Working

If you have ever seen a person with "yellow jaundice," you will appreciate the annoyance of this condition. Jaundice is not a disease, but a symptom of a disease, and results from bile entering the blood.

Dr. Copeland

Bile, formed by the liver and stored in the gallbladder, is an important product. It stimulates intestinal action and is necessary for the absorption of fatty foods. When the flow is obstructed and the bile does not reach the intestines as it should, it enters the blood and discolors the skin, which becomes yellow or greenish yellow, and marked itching follows. This is the condition commonly called jaundice.

Jaundice may be caused by any inflammation of the gastro-intestinal tract of the bile passages or gallbladder; it may show that gallstones are obstructing the passageway, or it may indicate disease of the liver, pancreas or blood.

This condition is sometimes seen in new-born babies and is then spoken of "icterus neonatorium"—terribly big words! It occurs on the second or third day after birth and may persist for a few days or weeks, but it is not serious.

The most common factor in jaundice is a condition known as acute catarrhal jaundice, frequently found in children and young adults. The cause is not known positively, but it is believed to be due to a catarrhal inflammation of the lining of the upper intestinal tract and of the bile passages.

In this disease the afflicted person complains of mild headache, dizziness, nausea and vomiting, and these symptoms increase in severity if the patient refuses to go to bed. There is no fever, but the yellow discoloration of the skin increases and the patient is noticeably irritable. In some cases the skin symptoms may exist for a long time without any other discomfort. As a rule, the attack lasts from three to six weeks.

Treatment of this disease consists essentially of rest and careful diet, and it is advisable that the patient remain in bed while the nausea, vomiting and jaundice continue.

A light, soft diet should be given. It may include toast, gruels, junket, custards, rice pudding, cereals, fruits and vegetables, but only skimmed milk, for no fat of any kind should be included. Daily elimination is essential, but severe purging is not advised. Hot applications, such as a hot water bag or stupes, should be applied over the liver region.

In severe cases the gallbladder is sometimes drained by the use of the so-called "duodenal tube" — a small rubber tube which is swallowed by the patient. Through this tube a warm solution is used to wash the gallbladder and its passages, and this aids in overcoming the inflammation.

Acute catarrhal jaundice is not an important disease, but all cases of jaundice which persist are serious, for, if neglected, serious consequences may result. Jaundice demands the personal attention and treatment of a physician.

TELL IT TO SALLY -:- By SALLY MARTIN

Modern Girls Do Not Mind Working

Shall he give the little girl up because his purse has shrunk and, if they marry, she'll have to keep on working?

Bill thinks he should. According to him, that's the big and noble thing for any man to do.

But hasn't the girl herself something to say about it? Or maybe she wouldn't mind working?

"Dear Sally:

"I am a constant reader of your column, and I think you do a lot of good, trying to help people solve the problems life hands them. So now I am asking your opinion of my own case.

"For two years I went with a girl steady. I was in love with her and still am. We parted some time ago because her mother objected to me.

POSITION IS UNCERTAIN

"We didn't see each other for a couple of years, but now we find that we love each other dearly, and we have been seeing each other again often. But here is the catch.

"I haven't much money. In fact, we would have been married by this time if it weren't for the bad business situation, which makes my job a little uncertain. She also works, and would be willing to keep right on if we got married so we could make ends meet; and I know that we would be happy together.

"But I don't want her to work. That is where the trouble is. Circumstances would compel it, if we married. She is strongly against my objections to her working, so I don't know what to do. I haven't asked her to marry me on account of all this.

"And there is another man who asks her out. She is not in love with him, but he treats her wonderfully and shows her a wonderful time.

"But she says she would give him up in a minute if I asked her to. What do you think of it all?

QUESTIONS RIGHT TO WED

"I suggested waiting a year, to see if she might change her mind about me, because we do want to be sure of each other, and I don't think I have a right to ask her to marry me when I have so little and this other man has so much. But she says she loves me and that nothing will change her.

"So we're putting it up to you and your readers. Have I a right to ask her to share my life, and keep on working, or should I step out and give her a chance to learn to care for this other man? BILL."

You're having a grand time thinking you're a big, generous gent who won't allow a weak little woman to struggle for him, aren't you, Bill? And you're willing to sacrifice her happiness as well as your own to make this magnificent gesture.

But suppose the little woman wants to struggle?

That aspect of the question hasn't occurred to you, has it, son? It should. If you have a right to be noble, so has the girl; and, as a matter of fact, most girls would heartily resent your effort to keep them from acting like regular citizens.

Modern girls do not consider themselves martyrs if they have to work, Bill. They do not want to be protected. They wish to be regarded as real people. And if you really love this girl, you'll treat her as you would treat a fine man partner.

As for her going out with the other man, that is also up to the lady. Don't worry, Bill; if she wants to go with him, she'll do so without your consent or blessing. And if she doesn't—if she insists on sticking by you—you'd better cut out all this melodrama and act human.

MODELS COMBINE QUALITIES OF WEAR WITH BUDGET EASE

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, July 23.—With one eye on the weather-vane and the other on a pocketbook, the French designers are managing to turn out, at this time of year, some of their most successful clothes. Frocks that will get the ultimate of comfort in warm or cool weather, and will cause the least pain to check books seem to be their aims — with the result that many of the new dresses are greeted with louder cheers than the Paris dressmaking world has ever heard before.

* * *

CHANEL IS one of those designers who features especially low-priced materials. Linens, shantungs, jerseys and simple cotton weaves are used to make the majority of her clothes—yet each frock and coat is turned out as well tailored as pre-crash models. Mainbocher, who designed several evening dresses of pique and linen to be worn at beach casinos, reports his clients ordering these same frocks to wear in town, and combining them with velvet evening wraps, metal slippers and other formal accessories.

* * *

THE CHANEL dress in the sketch, appearing at first to be a rather elaborate gown of printed marocain, turns out to be fashioned of linen, printed in black on a white background. White linen binds the edges of the zigzag portions above the waistline and forms the braids which outline the back of the decolletage and hang over the shoulders at the front.

* * *

BOTH SHOES, from Enzel, though of formal line, are designed to wear with summery dance frocks. One is of lame in white and gold, with little gold and silver straps lacing across the instep. The other, which follows sandal lines, but uses white satin strips to cover the heel and toe, is of ivory and silver, and fastens its tiny ankle strap with a strass buckle.

Madge Lures Ronald Away For Explanation

In my search for Ronald I went first to the big front veranda, for there is the spot where the men of our family and the masculine guests may generally be found. My father was there with Junior and Roderick, and I knew that presently the small boys would be given the treat they enjoyed most—dinner with their grandfather in his room.

Harry and Dicky were on the veranda, too, smoke wreathing from their inevitable cigars; also Hank and Bill, with distinctly saturnine faces; but neither of our young masculine visitors was in sight.

"Ronald and Bob?" I queried tentatively.

"Aw! They're prob'ly tying their ties a few hundred times to see they get 'em exactly right," Hank said scornfully, and Bill's eyes echoed his brother's comment.

MEN AMUSED

Dicky and Harry were able to hide their chuckles under the pretense of choking from cigar smoke, but I had to bury my smile completely, for the boys were looking directly at me, and I knew how fatal to their pride would be any hint of amusement on my part at their obvious choler. But the contract between their scorn of the supposed fussiness of the older boys and their own impeccable sartorial get-up was irresistibly amusing.

Much water had gone under the bridge since that day, earlier in the summer, when the episode of the scorched white trousers provided us all with excitement and suppressed amusement. Both Bill and Hank were now experienced "pants pressers," as well as versed in other sartorial lore, and I was sure that the two "collegiates," as Bill and Hank scornfully called them, would present no more impeccable appearance than did our two lads with their blue flannel coats, white flannel trousers and ties, hose and handkerchiefs harmonizing to the last detail.

GETS RONALD AWAY

But, alas for youthful hopes! When, a few minutes later, Ronald and Bob came down the stairs and out to the veranda, I felt like joining in the disgusted expletive which Hank and Bill smothered only just in time to keep the older boys from hearing it. For they were attired from head to foot in swanky, immaculate white linen, and might have posed for any illustration of "what the well-dressed man should wear," so eminently personable were they.

Even before I greeted them, I made up my mind that before another 24 hours should pass over my head Hank and Bill should also have white linen suits.

But when I looked into Ronald's face I forgot every other consideration but the interview I had planned with him. The boy was suffering. His eyes betrayed him, as did his crooked, pathetic smile, although his words and manner were as merry as those of that irresponsible, carefree young sophomore, Bob Trevellan.

"I've been waiting for you," I told him when the perfunctory greetings were over. "There's something I don't just like about my rock garden, and I want your advice."

"I knew I ought to have chosen landscape architecture as a career." Bob Trevellan struck in, with the audacity that endears him to all women.

"Beautiful ladies will always want to consult Ron. But"—hopefully—"I'm an awful good handy man, if you want any spading done. I'll even sacrifice my new togs in your cause."

"I couldn't accept such a sacrifice," I told him. "You stay and 'brighten the corner' for these jaded men"—I waved an airy hand at Harry and Dicky—"while Ronald and I inspect the rock garden."

"With Bob's derisive laughter following us, Ronald and I went out of the door and walked over to the secluded spot where my beloved rock garden wanders among the trees, culminating in the lily pool that Dicky had ready for me as a surprise when I came home from the hospital with my new wee daughter.

"How beautiful it all is!" Ronald said, with the quick appreciation of beauty that I knew had influenced him in his choice of a profession. "But," he added, with his keen young eyes fixed on mine, "you did not bring me out here to talk about the rock garden, Mrs. Graham. I'm pretty sure of that. And—forgive me, but—I—I—don't want to talk about Marion, even to you."

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Luck in Distribution.

However well one may play the cards, the success or failure of a contract quite frequently rests upon finding a fortunate distribution of the adversely held cards. A player may be void of a suit and thus wreck a game or Slam which would have been safely made had that suit been favorably distributed from the Declarer's standpoint. On the other hand, the Declarer may sometimes find such fortunate distribution that a contract, otherwise impossible, is made certain through the favors of favorable suit distribution in the adverse hands.

An example of a hand that was somewhat overbid, but excellently played through taking advantage of the favors of distribution, is given below:

South—Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 7 5 2 ♡ 10 6 3 ◇ K Q 10 6 ♣ 9 6 5
♠ 8 4 ♡ K Q 8 5 4 2 ◇ 9 4 ♣ 10 7 4	North West East South	♠ Q 9 6 ♡ J ◇ J 8 7 5 3 2 ♣ 8 3 2
	♠ A K J 10 3 ♡ A 9 7 ◇ A ♣ A K Q J

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	Pass	3 ◇ (1)	Pass
4 ♣ (2)	Pass	4 ♠ (3)	Pass
6 ♠ (4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) The correct response to the Forcing two-bid. North has a biddable suit and 1½ honor-tricks.

(2) Although South holds all the Aces, he does not bid no-trump. Game or probably Slam, after partner has responded with the showing of strength, is much more important than the count for honors held.

(3) North does not hold adequate support for either clubs or spades, but naturally prefers the spade suit, which, because of the order of bidding, is evidently as long, if not longer than the club suit.

(4) The Slam bid here is an overbid. While South controls the first lead of any suit, the fact that the diamond Ace is blank may make it impossible for him to enter Dummy and thus avail himself of the opportunity to discard losing cards or to take a finesse in the trump suit.

West opened the heart King, upon which East dropped the Knave, and with the fall of this card, South planned the play of the hand. He then led two rounds of trumps, but the Queen failed to drop. This was followed with the Ace of diamonds and four leads of clubs. If South's reasoning was correct, and East held only the Knave singleton of hearts originally, and also the spade Queen, the elimination of clubs from his hand, following the automatic elimination of hearts, must give South his contract. East refused to trump the fourth club, but he was then thrown in the lead with a trump and compelled to lead to the diamonds in Dummy, upon which South discarded his losing hearts.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

South bid one club and West bid one spade. What should North bid, holding:

♠ 2 ♡ K 7 6 4 ◇ A 8 5 ♣ A Q 10 8 7

Answer: Four clubs. The hand has 6½ playing tricks, and justifies an immediate Jump Raise.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Bridge Prize.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for the hostess to keep the prize at a bridge party if she has the highest score?

D. N.

Yes, it is proper . . . I am always for the person who wins the prize keeping it. Of course if she wishes to give the prize to someone, she may, but there is no reason why she should do this, and by no means should she feel that she must or should do this.

A Celebration.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is to attend a celebration in honor of her husband. Would it be proper for her and the children to applaud when the speeches are given?

K.

Yes, indeed. There is every reason why they should show their enthusiasm in just this way!

BRITAIN GAINED BY DROPPING GOLD BASIS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 23.—When Sir Josiah Stamp, British railroad president, director of the Bank of England and outstanding economist, recently visited in this country, he told me that Britain's chief gain since going off the gold standard was in avoiding the additional slump which took place elsewhere throughout the world.

Mr. Rukeyser

This analysis is sustained by Hartley Withers, outstanding British economist and war-time advisor to the British treasury, who points out in an intimate personal note:

"In answer to your questions, I think there has been some slight gain to England since we were pushed off gold, and a very big gain as compared with the further deterioration that has gone on elsewhere. We can't improve much till the rest of the world steadies, but we have improved a bit and we are in much better shape psychologically, feeling that we have faced up to things.

"The difference between English and American banking experience is surely explained by the different systems—England has 10 or a dozen banks out of which most of the country's business is done by five, built up by consolidations and amalgamations into immense strength and widespread interests; America with 20,000 odd banks, the greater number of which are little tin-pot shops, dependent on one industry or locality. Your country's opposition to branch banking has cost you dear.

"I fully agree with you in your view that better things are on the way and hope and believe that your country will share and perhaps lead in the recovery.

"Glad to hear that M. Junior's expansion is satisfactory. I hope his demand curve and consumption capacity will be a potent influence in raising the world price level."

The New Republic describes the vast mounting of policy loans against life insurance as a means of selling insurance short. Protection is reduced by the amount of the loan, and the policyholder does not cover until he discharges the loan, or replaces the amount of the loan, and the policyholder or in some other way reorganizes his insurance estate. The regrettable fact is that many of the policies against which maximum loans have been taken, eventually lapse, accordingly, there is a very real question whether state laws, providing for policy loans, ought not to be surrounded with greater safeguards. Three billion dollars are involved in policy loans, affecting insurance coverage of perhaps fifteen billion dollars.

GMO QUARTER NET 7 CENTS

NEW YORK, July 22.—(AP.)—The General Motors Corporation today reported net earnings of $3,326,377 for the quarter ended June 30, against $55,122,767 for the same period last year. These earnings include equities in undivided profits or losses of subsidiary or affiliated companies not consolidated.

After preferred dividends there was a balance of $2,982,169 for the common stock, which was equivalent to 7 cents a share, against $1.22 in the second quarter of 1931.

For the first half year the company's net earnings were $15,019,404, against $64,122,176 in the first half of 1931, equivalent after preferred dividends to 25 cents a share on the common, against $1.83 for the corresponding 1931 period.

Cash, United States government and other marketable securities at June 30, 1932, amounted to $215,897,767, compared with $205,029,119 at December 31, 1931, and $245,856,668 at June 30, 1931. Net working capital at June 30, 1932, amounted to $259,632,636, compared with $273,915,923 at December 31, 1931, and $328,651,750 at June 30, 1931.

Conley to Operate Indian Car Fleet

W. J. Curley, president of the Pennsylvania - Conley Tank Car Company, announced today that his company has made arrangements to take over the entire tank car fleet of the Indian Refining Company, involving about 1,500 tank cars.

President Curley also announces that his concern is entering into a long-term lease agreement with the Texas company, which has a controlling interest in the Indian Refining Company, to furnish all of the tank cars at present required for use by the Indian Refining Company.

Saskatchewan Pool Has Million Surplus

REGINA, Sask., July 23.—(AP.)—The Saskatchewan wheat pool will complete the present crop year with a surplus of over $1,000,000, after providing for all operating costs, A. F. Sproule, director for wheat pool district No. 2, said today.

Commenting upon this result, Mr. Sproule remarked that the agricultural co-operative movement "has been able to withstand the shock of the depression better than most mercantile concerns."

Introducing 'Big Four' Who Will Head Eastern Roads

By B. C. FORBES

Consummation of the eastern railway mergers, at last indorsed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, will create a Big Four, Gen. Atterbury, of the Pennsylvania; P. E. Williamson, of the New York Central; Daniel Willard, of the Baltimore and Ohio; O. P. Van Sweringen, of the Chesapeake and Ohio-Nickel Plate.

What kind of humans are they?

B. C. Forbes

Atterbury is a college graduate who became an apprentice in a railway shop in a day when few college graduates were attracted to railroading. Perhaps it was because he felt a little superior that he had a run-in one day with one of the rule-of-thumb fellows over him. When the tiff was carried to a higher-up, the latter left the college graduate know where he got off.

That taught Atterbury — although he was sure he was right—the importance of discipline, of obeying orders.

The General, as a matter of fact, developed into an extremely strict disciplinarian after the war. He got that way in France, where he was the big boss of transportation. Since then the military edges have been rubbed off him and much of the old esprit de corps characterizing the Pennsy has long since been restored.

Atterbury, although 66, has distinctly modernistic, progressive ideas. It was he who set the example of linking up air and rail transportatin. He is aggressive, hard-working, forceful, enterprising.

DANIEL WILLARD, a Vermont rural lad, who started railroading by striving to keep the fire of a wheezy engine supplied with wood, developed into the most successful handler of railway labor. "The B. & O. labor plan," under which men and management work in the closest co-operation, is regarded as a model.

Willard, now past 70, is the embodiment of earnest industriousness. He is vigilantly on the job early and late. Denied generous schooling, he has become a learned, cultured gentleman—there was a time when he was never without a French manual when he was not so very long ago, mastering that language.

He is a believer in living and letting live. His influence in the mammoth merger problem has always been conciliatory and affirmative.

O. P. Van Sweringen is the only one of the big four not a practical railroad man from his youth up. His first interest in transportation was purely incidental to a most ambitious and successful real estate development in Cleveland. But transportation captured his imagination.

Since then he, with his brother M. J., has acquired control of vaster railway interests than any other person in America, with the possible exception of Arthur Curtiss James. Their operations in the last decade or more have been more reminiscent of the exploits of such giants as Huntington, Hill and Harriman than ay other present-day magnate. They coralled control of one railroad after another, bought importantly into other roads, and are now masters of a vast system.

Their financial backing has always been more or less of a mystery. My understanding is that the late George F. Baker, unique spotter of talent, became tremendously impressed not only by their ability but by their character.

Their hight-hand operating man, J. J. Bernet, whom they transferred from their Erie and who is now head of Chesapeake and Ohio, is recognized as an unusually able operator. Also, Mr. Bernet has a delightful sense of humor.

WILLIAMSON, A Yale graduate, started as a clerk with the New York Central thirty-four years ago—he is 56—served in various humble capacities, gradually won a reputation, exhibited extraordinary aptitude for gaining the co-operation of fellow-workers, did notable work during the war, was annexed by the late Howard Iliott as a vice president of the Northern Pacific, rose to the top and, only six years after leaving the New York Central as general superintendent returned as its president at the end of last year.

His recipe for success is:

"Work like the very devil, learn all about your work, and know what it's all about."

EACH OF THE big four has followed exactly that principle. None inherited wealth nor has influence played a part in their climb to the summits.

Refrigerator Sales Make Fair Showing

NEW YORK, July 23.—Sales of electric refrigerators in the United States for the first six months of 1932 were 594,910, against 597,454 in the first half of 1931, according to the National Electric Light Association. June sales were 156,720, against 119,761 in June, 1931.

Railroad Leaders To Discuss Merger

PHILADELPHIA, July 23.—A meeting of presidents of Eastern railroads will be held in New York next Tuesday afternoon to consider the four-party plan as approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

PROFIT-TAKING TURNS STOCKS HEAVY

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP.)—Week-end profit-taking imparted a slightly heavy tone to the stock market in the early dealings today.

Rails held fairly steady, as did United States Steel common. General Motors dipped a small fraction, in response to second-quarter earnings of only 7 cents a share, and other issues down fractionally in the first half-hour included American Can, American Telephone, General Electric, Allied Chemical and Liggett & Myers B. Beechnut Packing, however, rose a point.

The list had come close to duplicating the peak level of the early June recovery, as measured by averages, in the previous session, and traders were anxious to see whether important resistance would again be met at those levels.

Weekend mercantile and trade reviews were moderately cheerful, mentioning the salutory effects of firmer livestock prices over large areas of the country. Retail trade appears to have surpassed expectations in some localities. Some textile plants have started up on winter and autumn fabrics, but on the whole, industry still remains in the grip of summer stagnation.

Foreign exchanges were steady at the start, with sterling unchanged at $3.55 1/8 for cables.

'MONEY' BONDS IN DEMAND

NEW YORK, July 23.—United States government bonds responded to President Hoover's signing of the home loan bank bill, which contains a rider permitting national banks to use government bonds bearing interest rates of 3½ per cent or less as a basis for issuing currency. The low coupon rate issues were in best demand and advanced fractionally.

The rail list, as a whole, moved higher, and scores of issues reached new highs on the move, and numerous issues recorded high prices for the year.

CAR LOADINGS GAIN 87,144

WASHINGTON, July 23.—Loading of revenue freight during the week ended July 16 totaled 504,094 cars, or an increase of 87,144 cars over the previous week, which included the "Fourth," but 253,895 cars under the like week in 1931, according to the American Railway Association.

Indianapolis Buys 40 Cars From Brill

PHILADELPHIA, July 23.—(AP.)—The J. G. Brill Company today announced receipt of an order for 40 electric street cars and trolley buses, totaling about $600,000, from the Indianapolis Railways, Inc., of Indianapolis, Ind.

Twenty-five of the cars are to be double-truck, center-exit trolleys. The remaining 15 are to be 40-passenger trolley buses, equipped with pneumatic tires, which do not require rails.

Curb Seat Sells At $1,500 Advance

NEW YORK, July 23.—Arrangements have been made for the sale of a New York Curb Exchange membership at $18,000, an increase of $1,500 over the last previous transaction.

CORPORATE EARNINGS

Underwood Elliott Fisher Company and consolidated subsidiaries, report for the June quarter net loss of $195,227, after charges, depreciation, etc., comparing with net income of $49,540 in the preceding quarter, and net income of $393,815 in the June quarter of 1931. Net loss for six months ended June 30, amounted to $145,687, comparing with net income of $1,099,465 in the first half of 1931.

Magma Copper Company sports for the June quarter loss of $7,490, after expenses and depreciation, against loss of $20,767 in the March quarter and profit of $76,358 in the June quarter, 1931. For six months loss totaled $28,257, compared with profit of $187,793 in the first half 1931.

Howe Sound Company reports for six months to June 30 net profit of $17,207, after depreciation, etc., but before depletion, compared with net profit of $477,165 in the first half 1931.

Eaton Manufacturing Company and subsidiaries including Wilcox-Rich Corporation, report for six months ended June 30, consolidated net profit of $45.03 after charges including depreciation and allowance for federal taxes, but before dividends on Wilcox-Rich Class A stock, which amount to $60,993. This compares with net profit of $564,171 in the first half of 1931, equal to 1c a share on 694,470 shares of no par common stock.

Underwood Elliott Fisher Company had net loss of $145,687 for the first half year, against net income of $1,099,465, or $1.44 a share, a year ago. The June quarter resulted in loss of $195,226, compared with net income of $393,865 in the same 1931 period.

International Combustion Engineering Corporation and subsidiaries receivers' report for the year ended December 31, 1931, shows net loss of $1,280,444 after taxes, interest, depreciation, royalties, amortization, etc. Operations of the French subsidiaries, whose audited accounts were not available when the annual report was prepared and are not included therein, were not profitable in 1931. The preceding report of receivers was for the period from December 19, 1929, to December 31, 1930, including operations of foreign subsidiaries for the calendar year 1930, and showed net loss of $622,228.

Trico Products Corporation reports for the June quarter net profit of $244,145 after charges and taxes, against $631,668 in the June quarter of 1931. Six months' net profit totals $600,604, compared with $1,145,930 in the first half of 1931.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

One Word After the Other

For quite some time now, the abused American public has been accepting, unprotestingly, a tradition which really ought to be looked into. This is the tradition which has it that there isn't a person alive who wouldn't be tickled to death to defend the drama. Some bold people get away with the assertion that every fledgling entering the newspaper business carries in his heart the wistful hope that some day he will be paid to attend the theater for the purpose of telling the world what's what.

Well, it isn't much fun picking fights, but there's no excuse for all this lather. For there are some Americans, who, far from desiring jobs as dramatic critics, would give everything up to and including their sacred honor to be anything else. These are the unhappy folk who go in for criticism in a big way, in what New York derisively terms the "sticks." No attempt is made now to refer to the critics in the major cities. No, in those towns, it is said, the commenators are quite as elegant as Broadway's own, and, like the last-named, are honored regularly by children in schools. Instead, it is about the paid show-seers in the tank towns. Theirs, my friends, is a miserable life, something to be described by an Ibsen. Or so it was relayed to me by one of them, now here seeking a berth on a Metropolitan rag.

The sultry day was cooled somewhat by his chat. He told me that in many cases the task of reviewing shows falls to that employe who may be kept on the payroll at the least possible danger to the newspaper. All that he is required to do is show up at the theater long enough to discover that what is going on up there on the stage is nothing short of a "rare treat." It's astonishing how frequently this gentleman (or lady) decides that the current attraction is the best ever.

In his case it isn't so bad. He soothes the theater manager and serves his newspaper, and thus performs the service of increasing the store of human happiness. There are, however, among these rocks and rills and templed hills, some very discontented folk sitting in judgment on the drama. These are the crusading idealists who are out to give the stage a few upward yanks so that the bodies of Beaumont and Fletcher may cease whirling in their respective graves.

Fresh from the varsity, the idealistic critic arrives on the job, equipped with a Sound Work on Dramaturgy, a reverence for the stuff he doesn't quite understand and a few of the more picturesque cuss-words employed by George Jean Nathan, et al. It will readily be gathered that a fellow thus constituted must find it tough getting en rapport with the newspaper's business office. There, as a greater, or at any rate, a better known writer than I, put it—is the rub. Rub's the word, come to think of it.

This drama lover is likely to find out that life is something less than a series of tingling adventures about the time he has been called eight times to the carpet of the managing editor's uncarpeted office. And when he discovers that the ingenue, whose performance he has rapped, because she didn't appear "quite the type"—is fixing it up with her married son to knock his block off, why, then, the critic longs for a calm job in the financial dep't.

Then, too, there are always the local managers—and you are offered this from one who has felt their whips—once for four short years. It seems to be required of a man, when he undertakes the management of an inland theater, that he be able to flare into apoplectic rages at the drop of a sour notice. Perhaps the commonest sight vouchsafed the critic in distant places, is that of a theater manager (a janitor in a full dress suit), condemnatory notice in hand, seated upon his (the critic's desk) making strangled noises. Also it is often the practice of the local manager, whenever he makes the mistake of booking a terrible show into his house, to withdraw his advertisement from the amusement columns.

This act frequently demonstrates the splendid departmental co-ordination governing the operation of a newspaper. The word that orders the show's advertisement from the paper can, without any lost motion, expunge also the name of the critic from the payroll. The phenomenon is called Service, and who cares to charge that it isn't just that?

Another item of this poor fellow's job which plunges him into gloomy thoughts of suicide is the touring actor "who used to be a star." What time the critic, before he becomes chastened, appropriates the ham label to describe the star's performance, he is certain to get a letter. Somewhere there must be a prosperous printer who prepares these letters. They are all the same. They begin by assuring the critic that "I cannot let your words go unchallenged" and end with the nasty dig: "If you were any good you wouldn't be in this town!"

Of course nothing is ever done about these letters, but they give the aggrieved actors a little pleasure, and as you probably have heard, the road offers little pleasure to actors, who invariably size up a town by the hotel, the restaurant—and the audience.

And the advance agent! Ah—the advance agent! It is possible that there are many charming fellows employed to press agent shows through the steppes. Generally speaking, however, the road agent is a person to keep on the other side of the railing. Most of them are given to violent back-slapping, "Audrey Piper" belly-laughs and tales of how they practically stole the entire dramatic section one Sunday when ballyhooing "Everywoman" in New York. And what an appalling repertory of last year's gags these guys accumulate in their travels!

There is, finally, the indignant subscriber. Whenever this creature finds himself and the critic in disagreement over a show, he attempts to overwhelm the poor writer with the information that he hasn't missed a copy of the paper in 21 years. Having pitched his argument on the lofty level, he feels safe in coming down a few steps. From the lesser heights he becomes himself. He calls the critic a very many things the latter doesn't believe himself to be, and which, biology being what it is, he has never aspired to be. The critic contents himself in this case, as in all others, with the bald comment "What a life!"

And then, when he loses his job, he takes what money he has saved, and comes to Manhattan to seek a berth on a paper, and imagines for a while that New York critics have it much different. No, there is no joy in being a critic—no matter what the town is. Except, of course, in the summer, when you loaf and write nothing, and take 1,000 words like this to write it.

Merton Again Is Back In Movies

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Don't let the silly title, "Make Me a Star," deter you from seeing the picture at the Penn this week. It is "Merton of the Movies" again, turned into a rare comedy romance and acted with real art by Stuart Erwin and Joan Blondell. The very words of the script apply to their work in this picture—they have sincerity and pathos—and up to that last line where he asks whether a taxi charges for just standing still, and then decides that "Well, it's worth it," this picture is worth it.

Mr. Seibel

Of course much of the credit goes to Harry Leon Wilson, who wrote the novel, and George S. Kaufman, who made the play, but it has often been found easy to spoil a good story or a good drama by Hollywooden heads. "Make Me a Star" is unspoiled, so don't let the title spoil your entertainment.

Stuart Erwin as the grocer's clerk who goes to Hollywood to be a western hero, and who is befriended by the movie queen who first pities him and then discovers his comic possibilities, gets every bit of value out of his part, and so does Joan Blondell as the movie queen. The picture is full of genuine laughs and a few hard gulps.

Besides that, it is well photographed, giving some incidental glimpses of life in the enchanted world of the film lots. It is neither overdone satire nor underdone potato pancake. Even Zasu Pitts isn't missing—no film is complete without her nowadays. If they ever do "Paradise Lost" in the movies, Zasu will be there, if not Mother Eve, then as the Serpent. Somehow she always belongs.

'Lady, Gent' Showing In Stanley

By EDWARD W. GOSS

"Lady and Gent," featuring that tough boy, George Bancroft, and Wynne Gibson, and a satisfying cooling system make the Stanley a pleasant place to spend an afternoon or evening.

The picture isn't encumbered with a plot—it just reels along to the jig time of box-fights, night-club scenes and metallic wise-cracks from the mouth of Wynne Gibson.

Bancroft is cast as a fairly efficient prize fighter, while Wynne plays a night club owner and the fighter's favored lady. Both are convincing in their roles. George supplies the heavy stuff and Wynne the let-down laughs. Wynne is especially good. She fairly reeks with the "hullo, sucker" attitude.

But just because the night-club hostess receives the fighter's favors doesn't give the audience license to say she's a naughty girl. The picture proves she may be a mite unconventional at times but after all is pure gold when the showdown comes.

In the early reels of the film the fighter's manager meets a rather unexpected death, leaving a young son in a small town miles from Broadway's din. Quite by accident George and Wynne visit the tank town and find the departed manager's boy, and then the film is well under way. George and Wynne, who always thought small towns were something the trains go through on their way to New York, encounter difficulties in the outlands. It is these difficulties that supply the laughs. The big tear-jerker is saved for the finale. Happily it is heavily spiked with the humorous.

The picture is worth seeing.

Patio's Floor Show Is Held Over

The current floor show at The Patio, the second headed by Sammy Walsh, will be held over for another full week starting tonight. In addition to Walsh, the bill includes Donna and Darrell, ballroom dance team; Phyllis Merle, personality girl, and Madge Caiger, blues singer.

Tax League Urges School Pay Cut

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 23.—(INS.)—A general reduction of salaries of school principals and teachers was advocated by James Hiscox, auditor of the Luzerne County Taxpayers' Association, on the witness stand in court yesterday when he was cross-examined in the appeal from the levy of the Hanover Township school district.

The association has launched a drive to reduce school and municipal budgets in the county in order to cut taxes.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 23.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

An artist in New York, because his sale of antiques didn't turn out so hot, got hostile at us. He said a "William and Mary" mirror only brought the paltry $400. Well, my boy, William hasn't got any mirror, but my daughter Mary has, and if I can't get her away from the front of it, I will be glad to add Bill's name to it and let the "Rogers William and Mary" go for $1.80. I will show that bird what depression really is. He says America is a "race of children and rogues, governed by morons." Well, that last part is just what the Democrats are trying to remedy.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

Gwili Andre In Warner

By MARY SHINE

"The Roar of the Dragon" in the Warner isn't nearly so lurid as it sounds. Gwili Andre, one of the new screen sensations, gives an ineffectual performance, and Richard Dix does the best he can with a weak role. Zasu Pitts furnishes the bright spots.

The setting of the story, is of course, China. A bandit who has been terrorizing certain districts, plans to capture a small group of American tourists and hold them for ransom. He causes their ship to be temporarily disabled, forcing them to stay in the village until he can take them prisoners. Richard Dix is the captain of the ship, and will protect his passengers to the last ditch, giving us meanwhile many close-ups of his profile.

The captain huddles his people into one building, which also houses the alluring sweetheart of the bandit, none other than Gwili Andre, trying to act like Greta Garbo. The bandits burst into the town, with much firing of guns, flaring torches and bloodshed, meeting return fire from Capt. Dix, who has a trusty machine gun on the roof.

The besiegers cut off the water supply of the besieged, and food runs low, and still Richard and his little coterie hang on. Will they hold out, or will the bandit get them in his clutches? And there is Gwili Andre trying to get Capt. Richard to fall for her, but he mistrusts the attentions of a bandit's sweetheart. If you just can't bear the suspense and can't make three winning guesses as to the final scene, you may as well drop into the Warner.

Railroads Get New Grouping and Scotch Tourists

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Railroad haulage picked up considerable with Congressmen going home in carload lots.

Interstate Commerce Commish highballed things by dividing the roads into four great systems.

We are also going to get a lot of Scotch tourists. They tell us there are posters in Glasgow advertising pleasure trips to America during the depression.

So everything's going to be all right if you stay off grade crossings, don't stick your head out of the window going through Wall Street or chin yourself on the bellrope.

With coal and wheat starting to move the railroads can afford to put trained canaries at whistle-stops. And as a gesture of courtesy to the passenger they might put attic windows in upper berths.

And one more thing. We wish they would take down those signs warning passengers not to play cards with strangers. The only people who will trust us these days are strangers.

BITS OF LIFE
All in a Day
By Mark Hellinger

The Pal

WELL, out of a clear sky, the man called me up.

"Mark," he said, "this is Buddy Jones. You remember me, don't you? We went to school together—and we renewed old times out at Will Oakland's Hunter Island Inn the other night. Had a great time, didn't we?"

I agreed rapidly. You can't go wrong doing that.

"Sure," I replied heartily, even as I was trying to recall who the man was. "Oh, sure. We had a fine time. Lots of laughs and all that. Ha, ha."

My voice evidently was not completely convincing.

"Why, Mark," he asserted accusingly, "I do believe you've forgotten. I trust you weren't tight. Don't you remember how we discussed Alan David and Jerry Ullman and Muriel Hepner and all the other folks? Of course you do, old man."

I hated to admit it to myself, but if some mug was phoning me and calling me "old man" after all these years, I must have been tight during our last meeting. However, believing in the old saying that it is better to be tight than be President, I lied in what I considered a most satisfactory manner.

"Why, Buddy," I gave out, "how can you say a thing like that? I was never more sober in my life. It was a decided pleasure to have seen you again. But—er—what's on your mind?"

Silence for a few seconds. Then—

"Well, Mark," came the hesitating voice, "I'm very frank to tell you that you worried me. No, don't you stop me. You absolutely did worry me. As a matter of fact, you didn't look like the same old chap I knew during the good old days."

Considering the fact that it is at least 80 or 90 years since I attended school, I hardly thought that strange. I tried to explain that fact, but Mr. Buddy Jones was too fast for me.

"You've changed somehow," he hastened. "You're not the same kid I used to know. I've worried about it since you left me that night. And that's why I'm calling you now.

"Mark, you're going to spend an evening with me. I've got a perfectly swell pent-house in the West Fifties—and you're going to spend the evening with me and my wife.

"All this Broadway stuff is a lot of nonsense. It'll do you a lot of good to get away from it for an evening. We'll sit down after dinner and talk about Gertrude and Hilda and Leonard, and all the old boys and girls. Remember, I'm your pal.

"You're going to do this for me, Mark, and for yourself. I'll be over for you in my car around 6 o'clock. And if you don't thank me for it when the evening is over, I'll be very much surprised."

As he waited for my reply, a thousand thoughts leaped through my mind. This Buddy Jones wasn't exactly clear in my mind, but from the names he mentioned I knew that he was quite certain about the things of which he was talking. More, I was more than positive that an evening in the old surroundings wouldn't do me any harm.

"All right, Buddy," I said. "I'll be happy to dine with you and the charming lady. I'll be waiting for you at 6. And thanks very much.

Promptly at 6, Mr. Jones called for me in his machine. As I climbed in he was duly apologetic. A sudden business call, it seemed, compelled him to go to a certain hotel. I was to go immediately to his home, and his chauffeur would take me there while he engaged a cab. He would join me as soon as he was through.

I tried to argue, but it was no use. Buddy leaped from his machine into a cab—and was gone . . .

A short time later—all too short as it turned out—I was with Mrs. Jones. I had a slight suspicion about this woman, and my suspicion had been more than correct. She weighed at least 240 pounds, and then she was on a diet. I generally like fat people—but this one had a thin sense of humor.

"Come right in," she muttered severely. "My husband told me about you. You're the writer, aren't you? Heard about you, but I never read any of your stuff. Must be pretty bad if I could never get interested in it. Come right in."

I swallowed hard and walked in. After all, I was there—and I was a guest. It wouldn't be long before Buddy would be home, and I knew that he would turn out all right.

As I hit the library I found visitors present. Six or seven of them. I tell them here—and I sincerely trust that one or two of them will read it—that they were the snippiest looking mugs I've ever been unfortunate enough to gaze upon. They gave me a few brief stares and turned away. I guess that one or two of them must have read me, after all. Otherwise, how could I account for those black looks?

"Will you have a cocktail?" asked Mrs. Jones.

I brightened.

"I might have one, thank you," I returned. "But just one."

She turned to the other guests by way of response.

"Didn't I tell you about these newspapermen?" she questioned. Then she turned to me again. "I'm very sorry, Mr. Hellinger, but we very seldom drink in this house. I only asked you by way of experiment. You don't mind, do you?"

I was on the verge of placing two fairly strong hands around her neck and pressing very firmly. But I restrained myself.

"No, lady," I replied. "I love it." . . .

I'm not going to bore you with the details of that dinner. It was absolutely horrible. There was one rather cute little servant girl, but that was all. Nobody tried to make conversation. It was most embarrassing to me.

Buddy Jones never showed up. My old school chum had deserted me completely. How I hated that guy then—and how I hate him now—can never be placed on paper. Sufficient to relate that I regarded him in the light of a plague. And in these times, the plague's the thing.

After two hours that seemed like 10, I finally got away. Don't ask me how I did it, because I hate to say. All right, I'll say it. I grabbed my hat when nobody was looking and sneaked from the house. And if you'd have been in my spot, you'd have done the same thing. Only earlier.

You probably know there will be an ending of some kind. Otherwise I would never have written the story. Well, you'll find this one difficult to believe—but's it's the truth, so help me Winchell. Shortly after two o'clock the following morning, I ran into Buddy Jones as he was emerging from a speakeasy. He had a blonde on each arm.

"Nice thing you did to me tonight!" I said angrily. "What was the big idea of doing what you did?"

He smiled drunkenly.

"You're only kidding, Mark," he hiccoughed. "You're not sore. Somebody had to shtay home to keep the wife and guestsh company—and ain't you my pal!"

London Sees Zeppelin Flight

THE GLOBE TROTTER

A Zeppelin over London, the very idea of which once struck terror to the hearts of Britishers, is shown in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn, Fulton and other theaters. It is, of course, only a friendly visit of Dr. Hugo Eckener in his great Graf Zeppelin, and on this particular trip the Hearst Metrotone News cameraman photographs all the interesting points of the English metropolis. The final scenes show willing hands helping the big ship land on English soil. There is an interesting description of the trip by the Globe Trotter.

Five dry leaders from various parts of the country hold a powwow in Washington and air their opinions of the wets. Among those seen and heard are Dr. Clarence True Wilson, Dr. Robert Watson, of Boston; S. Earl Taylor, of Los Angeles; Dr. R. P. Hutton, of Rhode Island, and Dr. F. Scott McBride.

Both Republican and Democratic parties came in for a verbal lambasting on their recent missions and repeal planks. Apparently they are not a bit downhearted and they give the wets something to think about and—perhaps a laugh or two.

Gen. von Mackensen, the Kaiser's field marshal, comes out of retirement in Hanover, Germany, to greet the Black Hussars, whom he formerly commanded. Mackensen is 83 years old but still every inch a soldier.

Human flies brave all kinds of dangers to make a final inspection of the new skyscraper at 60 Wall street, New York, which towers 950 feet in the air and is the third highest building in the world. A Hearst Metrotone cameraman goes along and gets some amazing scenes of the financial district from these dizzy heights.

Jim Londos, Greek Adonis of the mat, had his shoulders pinned to the floor for first time in three years by Ray Steele at Los Angeles. Ray turned the trick after an hour's struggle, but inasmuch as the bout was run on the two-thirds rule, Londos came back and won the second fall, then time was up and the match was declared a draw. The pictures contain many thrills.

Two Hawaiian divers thrill throngs at Atlantic City by diving from a platform 110 feet high.

Despite their wars, the Chinese find time to put on their annual dragon boat regatta on the River Min, near Foochow. Paddles are used instead of oars and enormous crowds on the shores scream encouragement to the contestants.

FIRST-SACKER FACTOR IN BUC DRIVE

THOUGH HIS PRAISES are not often widely sung, no man on George Gibson's crew has done or is doing more to keep the Pirate brig holding straight to the pennant course than First Baseman Gus Suhr. Gus is one of the weightiest factors in the success of the Buccaneers, and the brilliant part he played yesterday to aid in Steve Swetonic's eleventh slab victory and to help the Rovers beat the Cubs for the sixth straight time was only a continuance of the kind of work he has been putting up all season.

Gus Suhr

As a matter of fact, no first baseman in the National League is playing a finer game than Gus. He is handling ground balls, bad throws, foul flies and short pops to right in masterful style, and among the righthand first-sackers he is without an equal at pegging out runners at second base and getting back to his own sack in time to complete a double play. Suhr's batting average of .276 up to day may not be impressive, but his real offensive worth is seen in the fact that he has knocked in 43 runs, a mark excelled on the club only by those of Paul Waner and Dave Barbee. On top of that he's an excellent base runner, and only the two Waners among his team mates have scored a greater number of runs. In a general sense, Gus is one of the main reasons why the Bucs are in first place.

CLEVELAND WRITERS CANNOT recall a trip that was so sensationally successful for an Indian team as that completed this week. The Tribe won 14 out of 18 games in the East, and, adding in the Western part of the tour, the record for the whole jaunt was 16 victories against only six defeats.

One of the main factors in the Cleveland improvement is Bill Cissell. The former White Sox infielder has shown a great change in spirit since he found himself in new surroundings, and his fight, hustle and dash have had a very helpful effect in around his mates.

ONE OF THE queer quirks of the baseball fates is seen in the recent minor league blow-ups, as affecting Springfield, Mass., in the professional game. Forty years ago, Springfield displaced Binghamton in what was then the International League.

Now that the Eastern League has gone under, and Springfield with it, most of the players are being shifted to Binghamton, another Yankee farm. So Binghamton, once forced to step aside for Springfield, continues in the game with Springfield's best players while Springfield drops out of the picture.

COMMENTING WITH APPROVAL on the recent action of John H. Gruber, now in his fortieth year as Pittsburgh's official scorer, in exempting Catcher Earl Grace from an error on a throw that went to center field and charging Shortstop Floyd Vaughan with a misplay because he failed to cover second base on the attempted steal, Virgil Davis, Philly backstop, said that if scorers in other National League cities had been equally competent and fair in knowing and sticking to the rules, he would have set up a record last year, with only two errors in 114 games. Davis relates that when he threw to second base to catch a runner stealing and no one covered the bag, the error was charged to him instead of to the infielder who neglected to cover. He says errors have been charged against him in three similar instances in other seasons.

Sam Breadon

THOUGH A HEAVY hospital list has handicaped the Cardinals this year, President Sam Breadon does not believe the club would have fared any better if the 25-player limit were still in force. Far from wanting to go back to it, he favors a further cut from 23 to 22 or even to 21, and will offer such a proposal at next winter's league meetings.

"Further retrenchment is needed," Breadon said. "The depression has caused a sharp shrinkage in attendance. In St. Louis we have lost 50 per cent in revenues as compared with last season, and 1931 was by no means a banner year. We must retrench to meet the changed conditions. Salaries being the largest item of expense, I believe the greatest reductions will come from that source."

THE PHILLIES BELIEVE they have one of the star hitters of the future in Left Fielder Hal Lee. Pinkey Whitney expresses the opinion that in another year or so Lee may be a second Chick Hafey.

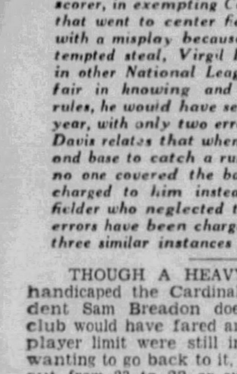
And the Quakers got Lee practically as a gift. When Brooklyn acquired Lefty O'Doul and Fresco Thompson from the Phils after the 1930 season for Jim Elliott, Clise Dudley and a bundle of money, Lee was thrown in for good measure.

SEEMINGLY THE ONLY doubt that remains in connection with America's chances for victory in the Olympic Games has to do with the ability of Uncle Sam's athletes to approach in the games themselves the form they have shown up to date. Too often they have failed to do this. Four years ago, for instance, during the American tryouts, the 100-meter dash was won eight times in 10.6 seconds, but in the games that followed in Amsterdam, the 100-meter final was won in 10.8, and at that the winner was not a representative of this country, but Percy Williams, a Canadian. Usually, there has been a considerable difference between the records made in the American tryouts and the marks made by the same athletes in the actual games on foreign soil.

VARIOUS EXPLANATIONS HAVE been offered for this—a faulty timing system here, the boat ride (though the latter did not affect Williams in 1928), climatic changes and what not, but many are convinced that the real cause has been the extensive tryouts. They have taken the best out of the athletes in advance of the met.

And it is widely suspected that at the bottom of the tryouts is the matter of gate receipts. Money is extremely essential to promote Olympic competition, and the best way to get it is to hold numerous tryouts with a great deal of ballyhoo. To get the crowds the promoters must present the stars, and by the time those stars have worked through tryouts for several months they are in need of a rest just when they must meet the world's best in competition.

IF HE DOES not succeed in defeating Tony Canzoneri when they meet in Long Island City on August 8 for the world lightweight title, Billy Petrolle probably will go on to the end of his ring career without winning a championship.



Billy Petrolle

It may seem strange that so great a fighter should never reach the championship peak, and yet there has been plenty of precedent. In passing out of the Queensberry picture without acquiring a crown, though one of the best battlers of any period, Petrolle will find himself in illustrious company.

IN ANY BALLOTING on the greatest fighter of all time, Sam Langford is certain to be mentioned. A terrific puncher, a master boxer, as hard as nails, Langford did not have a single weakness. Yet he never rose to a title. The men with crowns to protect, including Jack Johnson, would have none of him. Packy McFarland was another outstanding gloveman who went on to the end of his career without becoming a champion. Mike and Tom Gibbons were a couple more, and you might add Peter Jackson, Jack Dillon, Joe Choynski, Young Griffo, Owen Moran, Harry Wills, George Chaney and many others. Even Young Corbett, who knocked out Terry McGovern when the latter was featherweight king, did not win the title, as they fought at 126 pounds while the class limit was then 122. Jimmy McLarnin may be still another great miller to fall short of the throne.

U. S. ATTAINS LEAD OVER GERMANY

STADE ROLAND GARROS, PARIS, July 23.—(AP.)—The United States today won the doubles match to take a lead of two to one over Germany in the interzone final of Davis Cup play, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn defeating Daniel Prenn and Gottfried von Cramm, 6-3, 6-4, 6-1.

The American combination, veterans of three Davis Cup campaigns, held the upper hand throughout except for one game in the second set, when the Germans led, 3-2, and sent the United States into the final two singles matches favored to win and challenge France for the trophy.

Ellsworth Vines, American champion, defeated Prenn in four sets, and Frank Shields, United States star, lost to Von Cramm in four sets in the first two singles engagements yesterday.

Tomorrow Vines will meet Von Cramm and Shields will oppose Prenn in the final engagements. America need win only one of the two remaining matches to take the series and qualify to meet France in the challenge round.

WHITNEY STAR RACE CHOICE

CHICAGO, July 23.—(AP.)—Equipoise, 1932 handicap champion of the American turf, faces the toughest race of his career today in a mile-and-a-quarter Arlington handicap for a purse that may total $28,800.

It is the Whitney star's toughest assignment because he will be forced to pack a back-breaking weight of 134 pounds in meeting seven other fleet thoroughbreds.

Equipoise will concede 18 pounds to Gusto, winner of the $50,000 Derby and the Arlington classic last Saturday. Gusto will carry 116 pounds, but there is some doubt whether he will start if the track is fast.

Among the older horses considered to have a good chance is White Clover II, a 6-year-old from France, winner of the Suburban Handicap in New York. Others in the field include Pittsburgher, Risque, Plucky Play, Dr. Freeland and Tred Avon.

Eddie Jacobs Gains West Va. Final

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., July 23.—(AP.)—Clay court stars, survivors of a week of withering elimination matches, clashed in semi-final combat of the state singles championship yesterday, Paul Kunkel, defending champ, and Eddie Jacobs, Baltimore net artist, marching triumphantly up to the finals.

Kunkel, of Cincinnati, defeated W. V. Jones, Chicago dark horse, 6-0, 6-3, while Jacobs repulsed Alex Keiles, of Baltimore, 6-2, 6-1, blinding the former with lightning serves.

Miss Margaret Carspecken, of Morgantown, W. Va., and Eddie Slickle, of Ironton, O., advanced to the final round of the mixed doubles, eliminating Miss Bince and Merlin Du Bois, both of Moundsville, W. Va., in the semi-final setoo, 6-2, 6-2.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE FREEZING PARADOX—To melt ice into water it is necessary to supply a definite quantity of heat, more than 79 calories for every gram of water. The heat is absorbed or is rendered latent, causing no rise in the temperature of the water. Conversely, when liquid water becomes solid the latent heat of fusion has to be dissipated. Thus water while freezing generates a quantity of heat amounting to 79 calories for every gram of water.

Vital contests stand forth on this afternoon's competitive card as Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League cavorters swing into the latter stages of the 1932 campaign. Tussles promising spirited battles for position both in the Section I race for the Davis Keg and in the Section II milling for 1933 place in the upper division.

Frank Smith's Edgewood pacemakers face a severe test in encountering the well-balanced Mt. Lebanon array of Russ Unger on the Lebanon lot.

P. A. A. FACES TEST

Meanwhile Dr. Dave O'Loughlin and his runner-up Winged Headers take on Don Mattern's hustling University Club host in a tilt to be divided between the rectangles of both outfits. Meanwhile Bob Lampus leads his Shannopinders to Westinghouse, while South Hills treks to Stanton Heights. Shannopin and the Stantonians rule as district favorites.

Two highly important affairs top the Section II bill as Duquesne Library invades College Avenue and Rockwood visits Washington Heights Washington Heights and Edgewood Seconds on Thursday evening, completed their play-off of last Saturday's posponed engagement between the pair, the Heights array scratching out 5-4 victory to cling to slender margin over College Avenue. Y. M. H. A. jaunts to Edgewood Reserves to round out the day's program.

Chairman H. M. Rinehart of the annual Pittsburgh Center Junior and Boys' net championships, beginning at the P. A. A. next Wednesday, has announced that many of the outstanding youngster of the district have already qualified and registered for the Center event, victory in each classification of which carries with it a trip as Steel City representative in the National youths' title conclave at Culver Military Academy, Culver Indiana, the week of August 8.

Nick Altrock Baseball's Humorist Says:

WASHINGTON, July 23.—If those Pirates cop the pennant it will be just like Norman Thomas being elected President by a landslide this fall. Up to a few weeks ago, Pittsburgh fans didn't even know they had a ball team in town, let alone a pennant-contender. And last spring, when the experts were computing the National League winner, they didn't even figure the Pittsburgh club as a dark horse, but wrote it off as a zebra.

Nick Altrock

While all this was going on, the Pirates snuck out of the second division, tiptoed through the upper brackets and grabbed the penthouse position without touching off a single burglar alarm.

This ought to be a warning or a great moral lesson, or a bowl of cherries, or something.

MARKS TAKES JUNIOR TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

The three-year quest for the Western Pennsylvania junior golf championship ended yesterday on the fifteenth green at South Hills Country Club for Billy Marks, son of Dean Jim Marks, of Kiski, as the Kiski-Princeton University star had Robert Parker, of Highland, dormie four in the final round of this year's tournament. Marks sank his putt to halve the hole and the title was his, but only after one of the most spectacular rounds of golf ever displayed in this district.

Marks had an easy time defeating Shirley Hulse, of Bedford Springs, 5 and 4, to reach the final, while Parker pulled one of the big surprises of the tourney by ousting Claude McKee, of the home club, 4 and 2. McKee had been touted as an outstanding contender for the crown vacated by Sidney Carson, of Greensburg.

BATTLE CLOSE

When Marks and Parker started the final round it was nip and tuck up until the turn, where the match was all even. Each boy had won four holes and one, the sixth, was halved. Mark then went on a birdie orgy at Parker's expense to annex the title.

In the second division, Ned Caughey, of Youghiogheny, defeated Curtis Garner in the final, 4 and 3. In the third division, Bud Herserstick, of Chartiers Heights, defeated William Smith, of Greensburg, 5 and 4, while in the consolation flight for the championship defeated eight, I. C. Ball, of Uniontown, defeated C. Kay, of New Castle.

LUTHER, LE BOSQUET WIN

Last evening at the Aspinwall Bob-O-Link course, Ted Luther, of Valley Heights, paired with Maurice Le Bosquet, of the Highland, defeated Pete O'Hara, of Westmoreland, and Fred Weppner, of Stanton Heights, 2 and 1, in a special 18-hole invitation match. The quartet is entered in the 36-hole medal play tourney Monday and Tuesday over the same course.

The last chance to see the Pirates until August 11 is offered Forbes Field patrons this afternoon when the Buccos and Cubs clash in a single contest. As the two flag contenders swing into action, the home players show a lead of three and one-half games, their 3-to-1 triumph of yesterday increasing their lead by the margin of a full game.

The competition for first place will be carried to Chicago tomorrow, a doubleheader being scheduled for the home of the Bruins. In view of their edge, the Freebooters could lose all three of the remaining contests on the home-and-home series and still have a slight advantage over their nearest rival. The Buccos, however, have no thoughts of dropping the remaining three games.

SWIFT, ROOT SET

Bill Swift and Charlie Root are listed for a righthand duel this afternoon. It is likely that Lloyd Waner will be among the missing again. The wee centerfielder was due to play yesterday, but his bad leg was strained as he ran out his winning double of the previous afternoon, so he was given a dugout seat.

Steve Swetonic won his eleventh game of the season in the opener with the Cubs. Steve worked a remarkable contest in view of the handicap of a stone bruise on one of his heels. The sore spot gave him so much trouble in the sixth, Manager Gibson was on the point of lifting him in favor of Glenn Spencer, but Steve was able to finish.

Swetonic gave the contest a big thrill in the ninth by a smart play. Leo Hartnett pushed a lucky hit into short right with one out. Suhr dashed madly into the outfield while Swetonic ambled quietly to the base. Hartnett, meantime, ran about 20 feet around the gateway post and before he could get back, Swetonic took a shot from Suhr and tagged him out. The rest was quite simple.

MALONE BEATEN

Pat Malone opposed Steve through most of the game. The Buccos bunched four hits off Altoona Pat in the second, Tony Piet's smashing double driving in two runs. Suhr uncorked an important double in the big frame. Swetonic's infield hit with two out scored Tony with the last run.

Hartnett made the Cub's only run in the fifth on his double and Herman's single. Jake May finished on the slab for the Bears.

CHILLYSAUCE

Tony Piet's hot double that put the first game with the Cubs on the ice was only half of the Polish boy's contribution. In the seventh Tony prevented a knotted count by his assist on English's drive behind second. Two runs were ready to cash in on what started out like a single.

Second Baseman Bill Herman seems to be at his best when performing against the Pirates. He spoils Pittsburgh hits and makes more than his share himself.

Riggs Stephenson came out of the fracas with three hits. Stevie is a tough hombre for all pitchers and they all admit it. Moreover, the southern lad is a high-class gent'eman of culture.

P. Waner held to his fine batting clip with two singles.

A. M. A. SWIM TITLES AT STAKE TODAY

STELLAR FIELD TO COMPETE AT WILLOWS

By JESS CARVER

The district's aquatic strength will be on display today at the Willows, Oakmont, as men and women swimming stars in an eight-event program, the piece de resistance of which will be the Allegheny Mountain Association, A. A. U. 220-yard senior back stroke event for women.

Miss Mae Cutnell, of the Keystone Athletic Club, the defending champion, will be on hand to defend her title in the event. She recently competed in the Olympic tryouts in New York. Seeking to wrest the title from her capable grasp will be a strong array of girl stars of the section, including Emma Martin, Kathrine Gibbons and Wilma Moore, of the Coyne A. C.; Louise Clark, Johanna Gorman and Irene Patrick, of the Homestead Library, and Josephine Wagner, of the Willows Club.

The men's 10-foot fancy diving event is expected to develope into a three-way duel between John Cark, Bob McTiernan and Fred Pall. Strong fields are primed for the 160-yard A. M. A. relays races, for both men and women, and in the 120-yard open free style chase for men, with Russ Lindberg, Herman Adlesberg, Bill and Bob Renner, Dick Goldcamp, Jack Denny, Bill Lewis and Frank LeChance competing.

The Keysone A. C., Homestead Library, Coyne A. C., Titusville Y. M. C. A., Kaufmann Settlement, Clairton High School, Uniontown Y. M. C. A. and Kennywood A. C. will be represented by teams. The event will get underway promptly at 2:30 o'clock, with John Taylor in charge.

FINNS TO WAR FOR NURMI

LOS ANGELES, July 23.—(AP.)—Finland will make the next move in its fight to get Paavo Nurmi into the Olympic track competition by publishing in effect a diplomatic "white paper" containing all the correspondence between the Finnish and International Amateur Athletic Federation on the famous runner's suspension.

This correspondence, Finnish Olympic delegates declared, will be distributed among all other national representatives for the purpose of shedding more light on the developments, charges and counter-claims leading up to the action of the I. A. A. F. in placing a ban on Nurmi. The runner was accused of demanding and receiving excessive expense guarantees.

It is understood the United States delegates, regardless of how they may act on Nurmi after digesting all the evidence, will oppose the attempt to give the I. A. A. F. blanket authority to suspend an individual athlete or to discipline a member nation.

Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic committee, spoke for the American attitude, but added he would not be surprised if he and his associates were outvoted.

RAIN HALTS TOURNEY

MANCHESTER, Mass., July 23.—(AP.)—Rain washed out the Essex Country Club women's invitation tennis tournament yesterday after Mrs. Majorie Gladman Van Ryn, Philadelphia, and Josephine Crumbshank, Santa Ana, Cal., had built up a 4-3 lead in the first set of the final doubles match with Sarah and Mianne Palfrey, of Brookline.

STANFORD STAR KILLED

LOS ANGELES, July 23.—(AP.)—Lowry Rothert, 20, Stanford University athlete and brother of Harlow Rothert, a shot putter of the United States Olympic team, was killed in the crash of a skidding motor car yesterday.

Columbus Riders Here Today

H. A. CHAPMAN ALAN HOLMAN ARTHUR O. CALDWELL JOHN W. GALBREATH

Crack polo team, of Columbus, O., which meets the Pittsburgh Polo Club team in a game at Fox Chapel this afternoon. All are former college stars, Holman and Caldwell at Ohio State, Galbreath at Ohio University and Chapman at Texas College. Holman played quarterback for Ohio State and now is the football coach at Franklin and Marshall College.

YAROSZ BEATS TENORIO

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor

The Hickey Park arena, in Millvale, had a taste of a good-sized crowd last night, its best of the year, as Ted Yarosz, Monaca welterweight, chalked up his fifty-fourth consecutive victory as a professional in the ring.

Lope Tenorio, Filipino, of New York, was Ted's opponent, and Ted had more or less trouble with him, but won by an indisputable margin. After forcing the fighting in the first two rounds and tossing right swings and crosses that had Ted wary, Lope went into reverse gear, with the result that Ted had to do all of the leading thereafter and was tagging Lope with the latter going away and breaking down the effect of the punches.

TENORIO BACK-PEDALS

Ted didn't look as impressive as usual under these conditions, but he won all of the last eight rounds, knocked down Lope into the ropes for no count in the fifth round, shook off a solid low left to start the seventh and was blazing away trying for a knockout in the last round.

Only Tenorio's experience enabled him to make the stand he did against the younger Yarosz, for which he was given an ovation by the fans at the finish. It would have been a better fight if Lope had not back-pedaled so much, but with many of the fans he was a hero in defeat because he took everything Ted could throw at him and still was upright at the final bell. He scaled only 143½ pounds, conceding Yarosz five and one-half pounds.

KOSEL STEALS SHOW

The classiest looking boxer on the card turned up in the long-neglected Andy Kosel, a baby-faced bantamweight youngster from Turtle Creek, who boxed and punched away in big league fashion against Jimmy Gilligan to win every round and drop his man twice in the last round of the six-round second bout. Kosel looks like the money and ought to get a lot of work. He has more all-round ability than half of the main-bouters here, judging from his work against a rugged opponent last night and the showings he has made the few other times he has been given a chance to display his wares.

Jacquette Elverillo, Negro welterweight from Panama, outpunched the ever-trying Young Rudy, of Charleroi, in the six-round semi-final, put on after the main bout, dropping Rudy for no count at the end of the first round. Elverillo looks like a good addition to the local fistic colony. He already has boxed Wesley Ramey and some other good ones in other cities.

General Burr won all of the way over Packy McFarland in the six-round opener.

HOLT TO BOX KING

A card of three 10-rounders and a six-round bout was announced for Hickey Park next Thursday night. Jack King, of Chicago, managed by Ray Alvis, and victor over Harry Dublinsky, will meet Billy Holt in the windup; Sunny Jim McVey and Buddy McArthur, light-heavyweights, are in the semi-final, and Leon Jendrasiak meets Jimmy Vaughn, of Cleveland, in the first 10. Johnny Allen and Don Asto box the opener.

Tiger Joe Randall, Elizabeth Negro welterweight, boxes Tommy Freeman, of Cleveland, former welterweight champion, in the main bout of the revised card at Greenlee Field next Wednesday night. Frankie Goosby and Lee Sala are in the semifinal round and Max Elling and Johnny Durso will meet opponents to be selected in the two preliminaries.

BENNY GETS WIN

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP.)—After being three times warned by the referee to show some life or run the risk of being disqualified, Benny Leonard, of New York, the long-time retired lightweight champion, finally punched out a 10-round decision over Eddie Shapiro, of New York, last night at Coney Island Stadium. Leonard weighed 153, Shapiro 147.

MILLER PAIR IN FINAL

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 23.—(AP.)—The national public links golf championship will go to a lad named Miller, who has just trimmed 21, but whether it will be Chicago's stocky, black-haired Pete Miller or Jacksonville's slender, freckle-faced blond, R. L. Miller, remains to be told after 36 gruelling holes today.

The Chicago Miller, grandson of old Greece, whose father is a wealthy real estate operator, eliminated Talbot Boyer, of Portland, Ore., 3 and 2, in the semi-final round here yesterday.

The Jacksonville Miller, native of Nashville, Ga., whose father is a night watchman in a shipyard and who himself worked in a bakery until the depression cost him his job, ousted Al Campbell, of Seattle, Wash., 3 and 2.

George Moriarity May Quit as Ump

WASHINGTON, July 23.—(AP.)—The question being asked last night was whether big George Moriarity, absent from duty virtually since his fight with a group of White Sox players on May 30, would be able to resume as an American League umpire again this season.

Moriarity has been in seclusion at a Washington hotel since July 12. He had returned to duty only the day before, at Philadelphia, but quit the game before it was over, complaining of dizziness. The same happened the next day, and since then the man who once trounced scrapping Ty Cobb has not donned the little black cap.

The umpire is not registered at the hotel, and attempts by outsiders to reach him have failed, although President Williiam Harridge, of the American League, saw him yesterday.

Moriarity was reported out of touch with his league officials since quitting in Philadelphia until Harridge reached him. The American League president said he found him in a highly nervous state and that he was in no condition at present to umpire.

OLYMPIC RING FINALS TODAY

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—(AP.)—Trimmed to 32 semi-finalists, America's Olympic boxing team was to be completed today, and in the wake of the fistic typhoon that swept candidates through trials here were most of the favorites. The tournament is being staged under the auspices of the San Francisco Examiner, a Hearst newspaper.

Charley Crovatto

The squad that will swing back into action numbers but six of the 15 champions of National A. A. U. and Intercollegiate classification who hoped to wear their country's shield in the games at Los Angeles.

While five of the eight A. A. U. crown bearers punched their way through preliminaries and quarter-finals, only one of the intercollegiate contingent of six survived. He was Doylass Hill, of Tulane University, heavyweight champion.

Successful favorites include: Louis Salica, of Brooklyn, A. A. U. 112-pound champion, who scored a second round technical knockout over Joe Barry, of Cleveland. Edward Flynn, of New Orleans, A. A. U. 147-pound champion, who won a decision over Claude Ricketts, U. S. Navy, Annapolis, and Fred Caserio, of Chicago, A. A. U. 160-pound champion, who scored a third round technical knockout over Otis Ludlow, of Los Angeles.

The outstanding dark horse of the trials bobbed up in the 147-pound class where Charley Crovatto, of Uniontown, Pa., flashed real ability in buffeting his way into the semi-final round. Crovatto was the lone man of the five representing the Pittsburgh district to gain the semi-final round.

Fight Results

At Hickey Park, Millvale—Ted Yarosz defeated Lope Tenorio, 10 rounds; Jacquette Elverillo defeated Young Rudy, 6 rounds; Andy Kosel defeated Jimmy Gilligan, 6 rounds; General Burr defeated Packy McFarland, 6 rounds.

At Chicago—Baxter Caimes defeated Joe Doktor, 10 rounds; Jack King knocked out Jack Kane, 2 rounds; Angus Snyder knocked out Mitz Minikel, 4 rounds; Art Lasky won by technical knockout over George Neron, 2 rounds.

At Long Branch, N. J.—Lew Franklin won by technical knockout over Felix Ignacio, 7 rounds.

At Billings, Mont.—Ham Jenkins defeated Al Webster, 10 rounds; Ralph Lambrecht defeated John Foster, 8 rounds.

At Colorado Springs—Georgie Nichols won by technical knockout over Red Fitzsimmons, 5 rounds.

At San Diego, Cal.—Johnny Romero won by technical knockout over Vincent Martinez, 4 rounds.

At Phoenix, Ariz.—LeRoy Haynes won by technical knockout over Larry Rawson, 8 rounds; Ralph Carpenter and Watt Graham drew, 4 rounds; Young Langford defeated Ernie Hatchett, 4 rounds; Ramon Torres knocked out Ignacio Valiaverde, 2 rounds; Ernie Geren knocked out Bert Valesquez, 3 rounds.

BERTHA PATCH WINS

FORT ERIE, Ont., July 23.—(AP.)—After a slow track had caused postponement of two races on the opening card of the Grand Circuit here yesterday, Bertha Patch, black mare sired by Burton Patch and driven by Vic Rowntree, won the Clifton Stake, closed to Canadian-bred 2:15 racers, the only remaining feature of the day.

In Memoriam 1-B

In loving memory of our dear father, Philip Hellerman, who passed away one year ago today, July 23, 1931.
Gone dear father, gone forever,
Away from sorrow, cares and pain;
May you rest in peace, dear father,
Until we meet again.
Sadly missed by wife and children.

Lynn Is Present When Sarah Reveals Truth About Former Sweetheart

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Sarah asked a question in her turn. "What has happened between you? You must tell me, Tom, if I'm to help you."

He told her briefly. When he had finished he repeated, "I didn't do it. She just jumped at the conclusion. Didn't give me a chance. I could produce Rawlson, of course."

"Rawlson knew?"

"Sure; he suggested it in the first place."

Sarah was remembering Dwight's question; her answer, abstractedly given. She had seen Dwight and Bob Rawlson talking one day on the main banking floor in a corner, apart. Dwight had done well lately. She had heard he was going abroad on a long vacation.

But how on earth had Dwight first stumbled across Rawlson's path?

She asked Tom suddenly, "Do you know where Bob Rawlson lives?"

"Why, yes," he answered, "it isn't far from here. Why?"

"Go there," ordered Sarah, "now, this instant! Make him tell you to whom he has talked recently. Force him to."

"But—Lynn?" he asked. "Sarah, I'm nearly crazy. If you could have seen them! I—I nearly went in there and dragged her away from him. You know how I feel about her. I've been a fool, keeping away out of pride, stubbornness. If only I'd come back, made her listen to me, brought Bob to see her if necessary! But I couldn't understand; it seemed an awfully small thing to come between us. Even if I had done it."

"It wouldn't be small to Lynn. But you didn't do it. I'll talk to Lynn. Go, now, and see if you can find Rawlson. Leave it to me," said Sarah, and rose.

WAITS FOR LYNN

Tom knew he could trust her. He left and went out to find Bob Rawlson.

Sarah went downstairs and spoke to the superintendent, who knew her intimacy with Lynn. She had, she told him, an urgent message to give the younger woman. She wanted to wait in Lynn's room until she came in. Incurious, the superintendent admitted her.

She waited there through the longest hours of her life. No, not the longest; she recalled those others—she had to.

Would Lynn come in alone?

As it happened, she did not. The car drew up at the door shortly after 1 o'clock. They had dined late, lingered to dance and talk. Tom had been in the inn from eight-thirty until a quarter past nine and had come directly to Sarah's apartment.

"May I come in for a moment?" Dwight asked outside the door. "You know I've never seen your place."

Lynn had her hand on the knob. "Why, it's open!" she exclaimed in astonishment. "No, of course you can't come in."

"If it's open, I must," he answered. "Suppose the place has been broken into or something."

"But that's nonsense! Still, I'm sure I shut the door."

Sarah listened, waiting.

ASKS HIM TO STAY

Dwight turned the knob; the door swung. He stepped into the room, saying over his shoulder, "Wait out there a moment, darling." Then, "Sarah!" he said, on the heels of that betraying endearment.

"I was waiting for Lynn," Sarah told him. "I didn't expect you, too." But inevitably she had.

Lynn, close on Dwight's heels, exclaimed relievedly, "Oh, it's you! When we found the door open we were afraid someone had broken in."

She was flushed, but her eyes were tired. Sarah said evenly: "Shut the door, Lynn, and come inside. This is a curious hour for me to be calling, but I had something to speak to you about, something important. McHiggin let me in."

"I'll go," Dwight offered hastily. "I'll call you tomorrow, Lynn."

Easier to let him go; easier to say what she had to say to Lynn alone. But——

"I'd rather you stayed," Sarah said steadily, "for it concerns you, David."

He raised his eyebrows. "My dear Sarah, what can possibly concern me?"

Lynn, dropping her evening wrap, flinging her bag on a table, came and perched on the arm of Sarah's chair.

"Sarah dear, what is it?" she asked. "You look so tragic."

SARAH INTERRUPTED

Dwight stood leaning against the little bookcase, speculating, his eyes expressionless. Sarah, the incalculable . . .

It was to Dwight that Sarah addressed herself now. "Do you remember our conversation this summer at your house?"

"Perfectly," he admitted coolly. "Then you must recall that you gave me your word, which you have broken."

"Dear Sarah, you embarrass me! Cannot we postpone this interesting chat until another more seasonable—or reasonable hour?" he inquired.

"No, Lynn," Sarah said, turning to the girl beside her, "last summer when we were at David's I asked him——"

"If my intentions toward you were honorable, darling," Dwight interrupted.

Lynn colored. "Oh, Sarah—" she began, remembering her acceptance of her own doubts.

Sarah ignored both interruptions. "I asked him what he meant by his attitude toward you. I reminded him that you were engaged to Tom Shepard. He promised me that as long as you remained so he would——"

"Fade from the picture," Dwight explained. "And I did. But Lynn's no longer engaged to young Shepard."

"How did you know?" Sarah asked.

"She told me so," he answered.

"But you knew before she told you. Or else you broke your promise first."

"Oh, I knew or guessed."

"How?"

"One hears these things," he admitted.

"From Robert Rawlson?"

"Rawlson?" he asked. "Rawlson?"

SOURCE OF INFORMATION

Blank amazement. Too well done. A picture flashed into Lynn's mind: Dwight's car at the curb; Bob Rawlson walking away from it into the bank.

"It was from Bob Rawlson, was it not, that you also obtained information of the probable Seacoast merger with the Frontier organization?" asked Sarah.

"I don't know what you're talking about," he answered.

Sarah said quietly, "It doesn't matter, except to Lynn. Lynn quarreled with Tom because she thought that against her express wishes he had sold his confidential information to outsiders. That's neither here nor there. You know quite well what I'm talking about. Lynn confided in you last summer. You yourself told me so. It would have been easy for you to find and approach the person who had made the original suggestion to Tom, and to learn from him the moment when it would be wise to buy what stock you could through various investment houses and in small lots."

"Then Tom didn't—" began Lynn. Her face was colorless.

"No, Tom didn't. I'm certain of that," Sarah told her, and turned to Dwight again. "You'll deny any complicity, of course. Although it was, I suppose, my fault. I haven't forgotten that you asked me with whom Tom was intimate in the bank; or that I told you Rawlson."

"You're out of your mind!" he said. "I know Rawlson, of course, casually, as Norton's secretary. That is all."

EXPECTS DIVORCE

"It doesn't matter," said Sarah again, "although I congratulate you on your sagacity. It isn't everyone who does a little business on the side, while managing to separate two young people who care for each other."

"Sarah," he asked, in magnificent bewilderment, "what on earth has come over you lately? It's not like you to take to melodrama."

She said shortly, "Never mind that. The fact remains that you're a married man. And that both you and Lynn should know better."

"I shan't be a married man very long," Dwight informed her. "Or rather, not married to the present Mrs. Dwight." He waited a moment, and then drove home. He wanted to hurt the woman sitting there facing him; wanted to hurt her so that she would cry out. "Mrs. Dwight has done me the honor to consent to a divorce," he said, "and so I have asked Lynn to marry me when my freedom is fait accompli."

"Ah!" said Sarah, very low. She turned to Lynn. "Is this true?" she asked.

"Yes, it's true, Sarah; he did ask me to marry him. But I don't understand about Bob Rawlson and Tom and—"

"That can wait. Do you love him?"

LYNN ASHAMED

"No. He knows that. But—oh, Sarah!"

Sarah put her arm around the girl. "Because you thought Tom had failed you, you were going to marry David, perhaps, and be more lonely, more unhappy?" she asked.

Lynn replied, "yes," faintly. Then she drew away from Sarah and spoke strongly, distinctly. "Oh," she said, with violence, "I'm so ashamed. It's been my fault, Sarah, all my fault. You'll never trust me again. You see, that time in the country, I spoke to him"—she indicated Dwight—"about Tom. I told him the whole situation, asked him if—if what Tom was considering was unethical, dishonest. I felt that it was." She added, "I ought to lose my job for that, Sarah. I was worried about Tom, about the whole business, and a little drunk, too, not realizing what I was saying."

Sarah took her eyes from Dwight's face. She asked, "Lynn, did you mention Bob Rawlson on that occasion?"

"No. Not by name. I said Tom had an acquaintance who'd advise him." Her face was drawn; the black arrow on her forehead was clear against her pallor. For the first time she looked at Dwight, spoke directly to him. "Why did you do it? Why did you let me think, cause me to think that Tom—?"

He answered, smiling, "My dear, didn't I tell you all's fair in love and business?"

She was silent, her lips shaking. Sarah answered for her.

"Perhaps. But it's hardly a basis for a happy marriage. You have never had the ghost of a chance to make Lynn happy, David. You've even less now. Even if she had not learned what she's learning tonight, she would have married you with another man in her heart. You"—she spoke regretfully—"you couldn't make any woman happy, David, not any more. You've lost so much."

Dwight took a step towards them. His eyes were no longer expressionless. "What right have you to say that? he asked violently. "I love Lynn. I can make her happy. I will make her happy. I have never," he said, deliberately, not forgetting to stab, "cared for any woman as I do for her. She'll forget about this; I'll make her forget. I tell you I love her; I'd give her the world, if I could!"

Sarah said, "I suppose so. Yet you told me that once, I remember."

There was a deep silence. Lynn cried, "Sarah?" and Dwight repeated it.

"Sarah!" he said, but on a note of warning.

Sarah said, "Not that that matters any more, either. Why you have mattered to me, David, for 20 years is beyond my comprehension. But Lynn must know. It may explain things to her when, later, she thinks it all over; may explain why I was so blind."

(To Be Continued Monday.)

(Copyright, 1931, by International Magazine Co., Inc. Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Is a chorus girl's private life her own business? This is the background of "Blondie of the Follies," the new serial story starting in the Sun-Telegraph next Monday. Francis Marion is the author of the story and there is a thrill in every chapter. When you travel with "Blondie" you go places with this queen of Broadway and New York life. But hidden from the pleasure-mad, fair-weather admirers is the intensely human, heart-gripping drama of "Blondie's" private life—an amazing story that glorifies the soul of a glamorous show girl. This story is so good that it has been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a starring vehicle for Marion Davies. Don't overlook the first instalment next Monday.

"Didn't I tell you all was fair in love?" said Dwight.

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

Members of the Memorial Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, which is located in McKeesport, have great things in store for them in the near future. The first will be a watermelon contest, which will be held at the next meeting. On July 30, a special kiddie revue has been scheduled.

J. E. Murdock, manager of the Memorial Theater, was the speaker at the last meeting of the chapter. When the meeting had been opened with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and the club song, and when the members gave their usual yells, he spoke on the picnic and told of future plans for the chapter.

DOOR PRIZES

Door prizes were awarded at the meeting to Frank Wilson, Sophie Gliwa, Michael Evans, Edward Stall, Irene Rudick, Herman Bostocky, Dorothy Spancer, Helen Bilohlavek, Bertie Mae Crisler, Steve Buchas, Dorothy Shaw, Betty Wznac, Rose Mary Finn, Virginia Michael, Georgia Mae Crossman, Thelma Schrieber, Betty Howester, Charlotte Velana, Pauline Solvey, Ethe Kansa, Bertha Behunek and Dorothy Cavaller.

In the masquerade contest, the stunt of the last meeting, Harvey Feldman, 4, who dressed as a flapper, won first prize; Cookie Olsen, 10, who wore an evening gown, second prize, and David Hackett, 11, dressed as a comedian, third place.

Betty Haslette was again mistress of ceremonies at the last meeting of the Rowland Chapter of Wilkinsburg, held under the direction of Mildred Rotthoff. Little Betty introduced each part of the program; selections by the orchestra, awarding of a camera to Betty Wyland, tap dance by Robert Finley, and a tap duet by Betty Leresche and May Hurst. Betty also sang and birthday cakes were distributed.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAYS

Congratulations to the following members of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, who are celebrating their birthdays today:

Belmar—Vincent Schratz, Ira Hill, Louise Shannon and John Russell.

Etna-Harris—Joseph Abramovich.

Manor—Howard Groudine and Meyer Tisherman.

Plaza—William Reger and Emma Catullo.

Rowland—Billy Henry and Jimmy McCalpin.

Schenley—Mary Christine Walney.

South Hills—Albert Purnell, Jack Fleischauer, Aileen Birmingham and Bruce Catt.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Finger nails should be filed to an oval line and be kept moderately long. If they have a way of breaking for no reason at all, apply cuticle cream at bed time. Friction it in well.

Elbows looking gallery? They get that way. Take a cut lemon, rub pulp and juice over the surface of the skin. Let it dry on. Mix a little cornmeal with cold cream, and scour the flesh thoroughly. Results are wunnerful. Esmerelda. Same treatment goes for discolored hands. Or you can use the the cornmeal with soapsuds and use the lemon afterwards.

Lines extending from nostril wings to lip corners are often due to the bony formation on which facial tissues rest. Chances are they cannot be obliterated entirely but to keep them from wading in too deeply, there should be a two-minute facial treatment every night. Lay on a heavy cream, place thumb at lower end of line, first finger at upper end; keep the finger stationary, do quick nips with the thumb, working upward and then starting again. Slap on a cold compress.

Have You Been Knocking the Women's Cornet Band?

(From the Link, Mo., News)

For the benefit of those who are interested to know just what the Kitchen Band does with their money. This question has been asked several times and we wish to state, that heretofore, the band turned every cent into the treasury of the Carondelet School Mothers' Club. Recently, the band decided to establish a treasury for themselves since they were getting down to "brass tacks" and making a success of their talent.

If at any time, a reasonable statement is presented, the Kitchen Band has never been known to be "Slackers," in regards to anything concerning the Carondelet school.

Although the band has been quoted as being unable to play, we realize that every knock is a boost, and these boosting knocks makes the general public more curious to find out just what this "Bum Band" can do. I, as their piano player, can truthfully say "The Band knows their instruments." So here's hoping we receive more knocks, which means notoriety to our band.

An Aid for Building

Legislature Should Remove Restrictions Barring Federal Construction Help.

The Federal Home Loan Bank Bill is about to make large sums of money available to building and loan associations in most parts of the country. The bill proposes to liquidate frozen deposits in these organizations so that members wishing to take advantage of the present low construction costs can aid business by actually building new homes. But this relief cannot be extended to Pennsylvania under existing state laws.

Gilbert F. Meyer, president of the McKeesport Savings and Loan Association, in a letter to the Sun-Telegraph, points out that Pennsylvania is one of five states of the union in which building and loan associations are not permitted to pledge their mortgages to borrow money. A bill has been introduced in the present special session of the Legislature to eliminate this restriction so that advantage can be taken of federal aid. The passage of this bill will be of the utmost importance in improving business conditions in the Pittsburgh district.

Members of the Legislature should heed the plea of the Civic Club of Allegheny County asking them to forget politics and to make a sincere and earnest effort to meet the emergencies now facing the state. The Civic Club declares that voters are expressing nothing but condemnation for the lack of decisive action toward providing emergency relief. One thing which the Legislature certainly should do is to restore the appropriations to hospitals. It is doubtful if there has ever been a time when so many individuals who, through no fault of their own, have found it impossible to pay for needed medical attention. By reducing state aid to hospitals, these institutions may be compelled to discontinue free service to patients at a time when this assistance is most needed.

The dream of F. E. Taplin to give Pittsburgh a new trunk line extending from western Great Lake points to Baltimore on the East has been shattered by the Interstate Commerce Commission's latest railroad merger plan. The roads necessary to the link are to be distributed among the big four carriers, thus limiting all chances for the city to have the benefit of this new system.

Little has been heard recently of the plan to build a new short line railroad through the mountains from Pittsburgh to Easton where connections would be made with other carriers leading into New York. L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware and Hudson, who drives other railroad leaders into a frenzy whenever his proposed super-system is mentioned, may still have a chance to put his plan into effect when business recovers. The Interstate Commerce Commission carefully left Mr. Loree's road out of the merger plan, thus preserving the independence of the great rebel of the eastern railroad field.

Orders for 20,000 tons of fabricated steel, to be delivered in the next few months for bridge and other structural work throughout the country, have called 150 draftsmen back to their boards in Ambridge, and that means work, too, for other employes of the American Bridge Company. The upturn in labor in the state is noted officially in the report of state unemployment for June, which shows increased activity in building trades and road construction. It begins to look as if that last corner was the one behind which prosperity was lurking.

Courage resides not alone in the strong, nor spirit with youth. The visit of Mrs. Mary Mooney, aged 84 years, to Pittsburgh in behalf of her son, a prisoner (many think unjustly), reveals both courage and spirit worthy of the youngest and strongest. Known through the nation as "Mother" Mooney, she "carries on" so bravely that she causes both admiration and sympathy to be extended to her.

The "good thing" the Byllesby motor coach line has in its 25-cent bus fares is again indicted in the application for Public Service Commission approval of a bus line to operate over a new route to Brentwood. Its proposed rate is 20 cents single cash fare or 15 cents token fare. Some day, perhaps, Pittsburgh may get 10-cent bus service such as other cities have, but if it does it will have to be more alive in forcing the issue than it has been in the past.

The coming week is expected to reveal the result, in indictments, of several probes conducted by District Attorney Park before the grand jury, which has been looking into the wholesale issuance of tax receipts to politicians at election time, the diversion of county materials, including gasoline, to private uses, and other matters. It has been an exhaustive inquiry, as witnesses opened new leads, but one development seems to have been a widespread opinion that Allegheny County's other name is Santa Claus.

Most of us think that the village blacksmith has entirely succumbed to the motor age and has disappeared, but it is an actual fact that many blacksmiths still are shoeing horses within the shadow of this city's newest skyscrapers. The rotogravure section of tomorrow's Sunday Sun-Telegraph reproduces a photograph of exceptional artistic merit of one of these shops. The scene is little changed from 50 years ago.

Hot weather causes a great deal of real suffering, no doubt, but much of the "suffering" for most people is just annoyance because they are uncomfortable. The best hot weather advice remains as always—keep cool. Meaning that psychology plays its part, and that it is folly to aggravate yourself by worrying about the temperature. Dress sensibly, exercise sensibly, eat sensibly and keep cool.

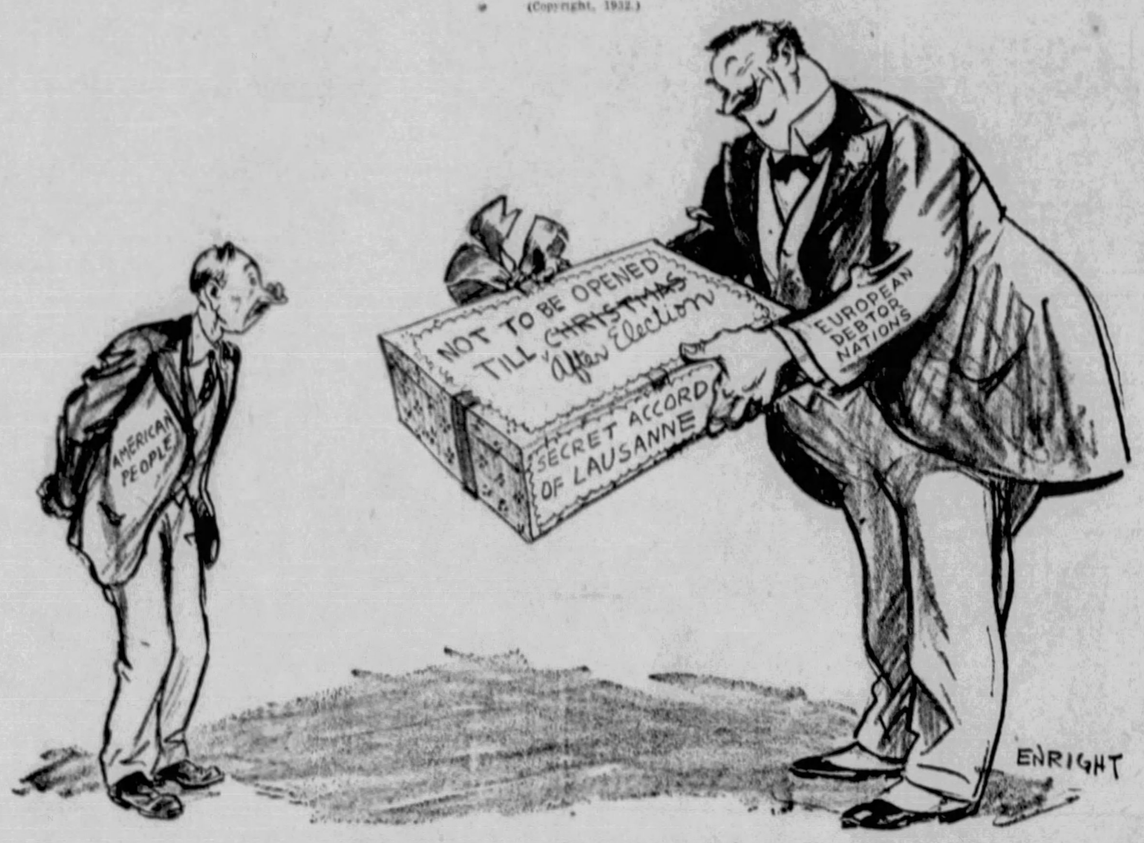
When Leo Altmeyer, Pittsburgh produce mer- chant, celebrates his birthday he makes it a real party. He already has begun and his birthday has not yet arrived. Instead of expecting presents, Mr. Altmeyer gives them. For a number of years his birthday gifts have been watermelon treats to those living in institutions, concluding always with a big party for patients at Leech Farm City Hospital. That is yet to come, but unfortunates elsewhere already have enjoyed his bounty. Mr. Altmeyer ages only in benevolence.

Is a chorus girl's private life her own business? This is the background of "Blondie of the Follies," the new serial story starting in the Sun-Telegraph next Monday. Francis Marion is the author of the story and there is a thrill in every chapter. When you travel with "Blondie" you go places with this queen from Broadway and New York life. This story is so good that it has been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a starring vehicle for Marion Davies.

The raiding of a brewery and distillery, each of fairly large capacity, this week, had no effect whatever on the supply of the speakies, according to a trustworthy scout who occasionally supplies us with such information. Wet goods still are as staple as dry-goods.

Surprise! Surprise!

(Copyright, 1932.)



'Tis a pretty package, this "Accord of Lausanne' that the international bankers rigged up for European debtor nations to present to the American public.

It's gaudy, brightly beribboned, sparkling with its tinsel.

But did you notice the label it bears, "Not to be opened UNTIL AFTER ELECTION?" Why, if it is such a good thing, hold the dear old gullible American public in suspense until after the votes are counted?

The answer is this "Accord of Lausanne" isn't what it seems.

It is in effect the Second Step in the campaign of the international bankers and European debtors to obtain CANCELLATION—FULL and COMPLETE—of Europe's justly due debt to Uncle Sam. The first step was the Hoover year moratorium, just ended.

The crux of the Lausanne Accord is that it is contingent upon the United States reconsidering and scaling down the obligations of European debtor nations.

Do you wonder that our present internationally-minded Administration does not want to discuss the war debt problem UNTIL AFTER ELECTION?

These Modern Femmes

When a man gives up one woman for love of another, it is usually easy to win him back; but when he deserts her for love of variety or love of adventure, he will never return this side of Paradise.

* * *

So many love affairs are lopsided, with all the love sagging on one side, and all the luck on the other.

* * *

The modern bridge club may not be such a worthy institution as was the old-fashioned sewing circle; but exchanging cigarets and reducing secrets may be a healthier pastime, after all, than passing pound-cake and dishing out scandal.

Most lovers' quarrels, as well as most domestic spats, arise from the efforts of one to demonstrate his (or her) superior intelligence—and the determination of the others not to be impressed.

* * *

And then there is "chandelier-golf," which a man perfects in the living-room, at great expense—and promptly forgets on the links.

* * *

Many a man marries a quiet, restful little thing, who won't get on his nerves—and then finds life so placid that he looks around for a few wild, peppy women to help him to endure it.

* * *

And now we have with us the Big-Butter-and-Egg Woman, to whom a smart car, a pair of Pekingese and a gigolo are just a part of the "overhead."

It's a deep, dark mystery to the average husband how his wife's light outfit of pyjamas, step-ins and backless dresses seems to take up three times the closet-room her mother needed for her petticoats, flannels and mutton-leg sleeves.

* * *

Now that men have discovered both poles and all the continents, perhaps some great genius will arise among men and discover a comfortable substitute for a padded dinner coat on a hot July evening.

* * *

The tragedy of a man-charmer is not in facing the fact that she has passed her last primrose station, but in REFUSING to face it.

Isn't It So?

Things done willingly are done easily.

No man ever appreciates the value of a dollar until he tries to borrow one.

A wise woman keeps her husband truthful by not asking too many questions.

When a man marries he finds there are always two sides to a matrimonial tangle—her side and her mother's.

Prosperity and good weather seem to be the two things we want to have all the time and get sore when we don't.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, July 23.—The Sealyham is stretched in a corner of the room where this is written, sound asleep on his side. The Boston, belly fashion, dreams, with his head between his paws, alongside my chair. To all appearances, they are symbols of the sublimity of innocence.

And I sit here like a fat-head and let them get away with it. Both rascals are used to mechanical routine, arising at the same hour daily, walking at stated intervals, playing, eating and sleeping in the same fashion. Break that routine and you house a couple of unbridled hellions.

At daybreak this morning my wife and I were called away by an emergency and did not return until mid-afternoon. A servant was told to take the dogs for the usual walk, feed them and then enjoy a holiday until dinner time. He carried out his program to the letter.

Upon returning, we noticed both mutts came to the door sheepishly, jumped up half-heartedly and slunk away, like the ignoble curs they are. So my wife went to her part of the house and I went to my bureau. We yelled for each other almost in unison.

She shrieked: "Come here and see this." I screamed: "I wish you'd look here." We met half way in the house and I persuaded her to see my side first. She gazed upon a large disemboweled pillow that had once been an accessory of an extremely comfortable lounging chair.

"You think that's something!" she sniffed. "Well, come with me."

So I did. And you know that pair of breakfast pajamas I bought her at Cannes last year? Of course, you don't. How could you? But it gives you an idea. You should get a peek at what happened to them.

They were not only torn to ribbons, but a table with a vase had been upset in what must have started a Maypole dance until the party got rough. If you think dogs can't reason, how do you account for their continued absence? Answer that and quit mumbling and rubbing one foot over the other.

* * *

A quick stamp on the floor will always bring the deaf Boston and all you have to do is chirrup softly and the Sealyham comes like a bat out of the bad place. Well, we stamped until we expected to hear from the neighbors underneath, again. And I whistled until I had to put fresh stickup on the upper plate. They weren't under the bed, their usual hideaway. So we coaxed and "nice doggied" them from one room to another. No dogs. Even a dish of raw hamburger and the rubber squeak mouse failed.

* * *

Finally they were found and you'd never guess where. Give up? Well, they were crouched behind a clothes gadget in a bathroom. "Come on out, suckers, and take your lickings." I said with that deadly calm that means the McIntyre ire is in magnificent fury. The Sealyham came first in a belly crawl. I thought at first his back had been broken. I motioned to the Boston and I hope to die if he wasn't limping on one foot.

Both cringed under my fierce gaze, then whimpering rolled over on their backs in complete humility. "What are you going to do now?" my wife inquired with something of a leer. "Well, they ought to get a good whaling," I replied. "Why don't you whale them then?" with even a better leer. So I turned upon her, dusting off one of my own leers en route. "If these dogs had proper training, they wouldn't carry on this way the minute we are out of sight." I snapped. Very evenly: "They're your dogs, it's your job to train them." By this time the Sealyham had crawled up and was licking my shoe and the Boston's nubbin of a tail was quivering like one of those electric vibrators.

* * *

Off I went to work. Now and then I'd look up. One would be peeping around one door and the other around another. "Bad dogs," I'd growl, and they'd slink off, returning at short intervals. Finally, I forgot about them and they crept all the way in.

* * *

And there they are, asleep, as innocent-looking as all get out. Just a couple of home boys, I'm through with my work and it is time to lay-to with the belaying pin. I ought to bear down on the Sealyham first, he's the stubbornest. But you can't hit a sleeping dog. Anyway, I've printed out loud what no-goods they are. I'd hate to have people read that I didn't know how to behave myself when left alone. But this isn't giving them the fanning they deserve. O, well, maybe I'm just not the conquering type.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Sometimes a queer feeling sweeps over you. You feel like a stranger; you look around at your familiar surroundings; you go through the accustomed motions of your familiar job, but everything has become meaningless. You feel lost.

You wonder what it's all about. You wonder what YOU'RE all about!.

Well, what ARE you all about? Do you know? Probably not. Few of us do.

When we start life there is none of this bewilderment. We know very little about other people, but we are thoroughly aware of ourselves. We are completely self-centered little savages. We know what we want and what we like. We know why we are doing the things we are doing. Other things may seem unreal, but we are perfectly real to ourselves.

Why does childhood seem such a happy time, as we look back at it? That's why. Because it was a REAL time. Because we, ourselves had meaning; and the things we did and the things that happened to us all had meaning—SELF meaning.

Then we began to grow up. The world took us in hand and "civilized" us. It taught us to forget ourselves and consider other people. It taught us to act and think as other people acted and thought. So, little by little, we lost our own identity and took on the ideas, attitudes and mannerisms of other people.

Soon much of our life became automatic. We no longer yielded to impulse. We did, mechanically, the things that we were expected to do, and our personalities were no longer a vivid expression of our own feelings, but a composite reflection of the feelings and thoughts of the whole social world.

In some ways that was a good thing. If we had stayed completely self-centered savages, we would not have been a treat to ourselves or anyone else, and we would have been continually at war with our environment. But sometimes we went to the other extreme, and became too composite. We learned to reflect others so thoroughly that we no longer reflected ourselves; no longer had any distinct, personal attitude to reflect.

Why are you flooded with that sense of strangeness? Why is all you do and are so meaningless? That's why. You have been so busy expressing other lives that you have become a stranger to yourself, and your acts have become purely mechanical, without meaning.

"What's the use of going on if life's like that?" you cry.

There's no use going on if life's like that.

BUT LIFE NEEDN'T BE LIKE THAT. YOU CAN MEAN SOMETHING, AND LIFE CAN MEAN SOMETHING, EVEN IF YOU DO HAVE TO SPEND MOST OF YOUR TIME LIVING FOR AND LIKE THE OTHER FELLOW.

But first you must find what you, yourself, really are? What are you all about? What do you really want to do?

You can't possibly be either happy or helpful until you have answered those questions. You'll be muddled and miserable until you do.

So sit down and take stock. Strip away all your acquired habits, your synthetic attitudes, your false ideas. Find the REAL YOU that has been buried, deeper and deeper, by the years; and when you've found that YOU, discover what it wants and what it needs to keep it alive—to keep it eager, and excited, and enthusiastic. Something there is in life that will do this for you. Find it!

Books? Sport? Politics? Fun? Handicraft? Farming? The love of beauty? Social service work? Which of these things will keep your soul alive? I know a man who rescued his soul by making exquisite trout flies!

Find yourself! Find the thing you need. Then do it—for at least a small part of each day—and you'll never again feel like a lost stranger to yourself and life.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Heart of Gold

Life is a flower with a golden heart:
Though petal after petal drop away
As one by one the swift-winged years depart,
Still something of its charm and fragrance stay.
As ever wider open falls the rose,
Still heavier, more potent grows its scent,
And rare, new loveliness the hours disclose,
Surpassing speech, yet strangely eloquent.
A flower is life; yet, as youth's petals fall,
And flying years reach out with eager clutch,
Time is defrauded; he can not take all,
But only graces valued overmuch;
For not until the final leaves unfold
Does it reveal its matchless heart of gold.

A Friendly Warning

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The death of Jules Jusserand, for many years French ambassador to this country, affects Americans as would the passing of an American statesman. He was an intense French nationalist, but during the many years he lived in Washington there were no unpleasant conflicts between the two nations, and unquestionably he liked America and had as good an idea of what Americans think and feel as could be had from intimacies confined to one political party here.

I used to see him late in the afternoons swinging along Calvert street after his tramp across the Connecticut Avenue Bridge. A short man with short legs, he was a fast walker, and Mme. Jusserand, much taller, and always with him, had no strolling promenade.

I heard him speak at Arlington years ago at the unveiling of the monument to l'Enfant, the engineer, who planned the City of Washington. Taft, then President, spoke, and Elihu Root, but the real master of English of the three was Jusserand. For he was literary-minded.

It is not easy to find more charming books than his on the old highways and byways of Elizabethan days.

Garner Will Be a Popular Campaigner

John N. Garner, returning to his home in Texas, met a series of ovations from the Texans at every station, and the train was an hour and half late in reaching Dallas. His has been a unique career, for he has never been a "barnstormer."

Since his election to the House he has never found it necessary to electioneer. Even the campaigns did not find him on the stump. His speeches have been confined to the House, and it is because of the character of these speeches that he is now Speaker.

No man ever rises to the Speakership who is not a man of personality, character and power. In no body does merit count so much.

Now, after a short rest, he will take the stump; and he will speak on the stump as he has spoken in the House—straight out. He will be a hard hitter, and will use the language that both the man in the corn row and the man in the counting room can understand. He will be a popular campaigner.

No Mincing Of Words

The snipers have been firing their pop-guns at him from a safe distance, but none of them will be eager to come within range of his fire. The attacks upon him have been of Wall street inspiration. In due time he will meet these attacks without mincing words. Thus at Dallas he said:

"I want to convince every honest man and woman in the United States that the power of government should be taken away from those who administer it for the benefit of the privileged few."

That is his brand of "demagogy." It is the "demagogy" of Jefferson, and the "demagogy" of Jackson and Wilson, the "demagogy" of Americanism. There is not an intelligent child in the country who will not know what he means.

But he does not mean that privilege shall be shifted from one class to another—for that would not be Americanism, either. Thus he adds that he wants power put in the hands of those who will administer it "for the benefit of the American people as a whole."

Mr. Hoover and Ogden Mills know what he is driving at.

So do the people.

They know that throughout the regime of Mellon, government has been administered for the benefit of a select clientele, and that the fruit has been rotten.

No Other Way to Restore Prosperity

Mr. Roosevelt had the same thing in mind when he spoke of the "forgotten man," and the clientele of those in power began to simulate astonishment and disgust. "What demagogy!" they shouted and wrote. It was a happy phrase because in two words it expressed the real tragedy of America.

It was not even an attack on anyone. If Ogden Mills is really the dominating factor in the Hoover campaign he will discourage all attempts to turn a distressed people against Roosevelt because of his plea for "the forgotten man."

Such an attack would be as ineffective as the quacking of geese at the legions of Caesar as they went sweeping by.

And all the more so because Roosevelt does not propose that the "forgotten man" alone shall be remembered, and the man remembered now shall be forgotten. He wants every element remembered, and the legitimate interests of all conserved and every section considered.

There is no other way to restore prosperity to this land of ours.

Wall Street Is No Asset This Year

If Wall Street does not want to get into the campaign it will stay out; but the moment it injects itself one inch into the fight it will be in a mile, and it will not be able to get out.

Under existing conditions it will be wise to tend to its knitting, let politics alone, and walk humbly with its gains. For there never has been a time when it was less loved or trusted.

There are hundreds of thousands of business men of the average type who formerly have been deeply impressed with the advice and warnings of "Wall Street," who now ascribe their losses and their ruin to manipulations in that quarter.

Wall Street is not an asset for any party this year. It would be a heavy liability. When the element it represents conceived the brilliant notion that it could turn the great mass of the people, including the average business man, against Roosevelt and Garner by denouncing the phrase "the forgotten man," and Garner's plan of relief, it revealed an astonishing ignorance of national psychology.

It attacked Garner; and Garner has made his reply; and his reply called forth shouts that shook the heavens in Texas. It would do the same in New York City.

Will Meet All Attacks

Just 100 years ago Henry Clay and Daniel Webster invited a fight between Biddle's National Bank and the Jackson administration in the expectation that the bank's money and influence would sweep Clay into the presidency. They urged Biddle to precipitate the bank fight by demanding a recharter long before the expiration of that existing.

Biddle had his doubts, for he was wise. But these two great politicians had a political conference with Biddle and finally served notice that since he would not follow their advice they might as well retire. Thus bludgeoned, he succumbed, and the fight was on.

Clay was nominated; the bank spent lavishly on campaign literature attacking Jackson; it tried to intimidate business men dependent on credit.

And the Jacksonians went forth to meet this attack with a smashing counter-attack; and the people rallied to Jackson and he swept in and the bank went down and out.

Conditions then were fairly prosperous—but even so, Jackson won.

In a similar contest this year under existing conditions there could be but one result.

And there will be no attack this year that will not be met promptly, vigorously, and from every country schoolhouse to Madison Square Garden.

Once Overs

By J. J. Mundy

What is the greatest ambition of your life?

To reach financial position where you could do as you please, and that to loaf, principally?

You'd like to be free from care, all responsibility, all demands upon your time or your efforts.

Have you ever talked with anyone who suddenly became independent and was able to enjoy such privileges?

Have you ever learned that after a short period of such a life, it became mighty boresome?

Usually it meant indulgence and inactivity which brought actual physical discomfort and ennui.

There was an aimlessness, a lack of desire or incentive in such a life that robbed it of its greatest charm.

Isn't it a fact that the things you most prize you have had to work the hardest to obtain?

Can you think of any degree of pleasure greater than that experienced when you became possessor of something that required months, even years of saving and sacrifice to obtain?

When things come too easily half the joy of possession is lost.
